100 DEAD IN EXPLOSION

WOMAN IN FAINT ON STAND

Mrs. Lillian A. Hayman of Cambridge fainted on the witness stand today while testifying in her suit for divorce against William R. Hayman at the East Cambridge courthouse. She was unconscious an hour.

Mrs. Hayman was telling Judge Chase her story of Hayman's treatment of her. Suddenly she turned pale, then staggered and fell unconscious just as Court Officer Byrnes and A. L. Taylor, her lawyer, ran to her aid.

She was carried into an ante room, where physicians revived her after considerable effort. She then resumed the stand.

Mrs. Hayman asks for the custody of her four-year-old boy, Robert, as well as for divorce. Her husband had filed a petition for custody of the boy after the parents separated. Then Mrs. Hayman brought her divorce suit.

Said Husband Struck Her.

Mrs. Hayman said that her husband had often struck her, at times in quarrels over dogs. He is a dog fancier. He very seldom gave her any money, she said, and she had not enough at times to buy food for the baby.

Upon one occasion, after he had threatened her, she went to the police station to get protection. Hayman at that time promised to treat her well if she would withdraw the complaint. For a time he behaved better toward her, she said, and sent her to the beach for six weeks in the Summer.

When she returned from the beach, however, she testified, he accused her of being friendly with another, and again cut her off her money. Neighbors gave her a dress and food for herself and the child.

Works Now in a Store.

At one time Hayman attacked her, according to her story, and drove her out of the house. She became unconscious outside and woke to find herself at a neighbor's house, where she was forced to remain for six weeks.

She now works as a demonstrator in a Boston department store, and gets $7 a week.

She denied any impropriety in her acquaintance with the man mentioned, although she said that she and her husband had had trouble over a picture of the man, which he had given to the family. She also admitted that this man had visited her when Hayman was away, but denied that she was in love with him, or ever told anyone that she liked him.

VESSELS BLOWN UP BY DYNAMITE

BALTIMORE, March 7.—With a terrific detonation, which was felt in three States, a barge loaded with dynamite exploded in the Patapsco River beween Sparrows Point and Wagners Point today. The disaster caused heavy havoc to human life. At 1:30 this afternoon fourteen bodies had been recovered in the lower bay by tugs and at that time it was believed the death list would reach 100.

DYNAMITE WAS FOR PANAMA CANAL.

The British tramp steamer Alum Chine, which was loading nearby, was sunk. The giant United States collier Jason, upon which the dynamite was to be loaded for transportation to the Panama Canal zone, was badly damaged. Four men on the Jason were killed outright and half a dozen others injured.

The barge upon which the dynamite was being towed and the tug which was hauling the deadly cargo were blown to bits.

As the number of the explosion pierced the air, a mighty burst of water rose upward like a gigantic geyser. A mighty tidal wave raised by the powerful concussion of the blast rolled up the bay menacing the shipping in the harbor.

The States of Maryland, Virginia and Delaware were shaken by the explosion.

Fear Everybody on Board Lost.

The tug, which was blown up with the barge, is believed to be the Atlantic, of the Atlantic Transport Company.

The British tramp steamship Alum Chine, which was loading for Christobal and other canal points, near the scene of the disaster, disappeared beneath the water.

A piece of iron from one of the boats was blown a distance of two miles. The Davison Chemical Company's plant at Hawkins Point, three miles away, was set on fire. The revenue cutter Guthrie, the tugs Hamilton and Britannia and the unaided tug Baltimore hastened to the scene to pick up the bodies of the victims.

Tremendous Damage Done.

Tremendous damage was done to the Maryland Steel Works at Sparrow Point, where every window was ripped out; many persons were cut by flying glass and other damage of a serious nature done.

Car No. 2430, of the Sparrows Point line, proceding towards Sparrows Point, had all its windows blown out by the explosion. The passengers were thrown into a panic. None of them, however, were injured.

Great Sea Stirred Up.

Wild rumors from as far as Annapolis were received by telephone and telegraph in Baltimore a few minutes after the explosion. Annapolis called up Baltimore to say people there thought a United States battleship had been blown up in the bay.

The explosion off Wagner's Point was terrific. A great sea swept across the river, picking up steamers and other vessels bodily, and in many cases hurling them with terrific violence against the piers at Wagner's Point. Lines parted and spray flew over the bulkheads as if in a terrific storm.

The shock of the explosion was felt not only throughout the city and adjoining territory, but at points scores of miles distant in Maryland and Delaware.

A telephone message from Havre de Grace states that windows were broken there.

At Canton, Sparrow's Point and Curtis Bay hundreds of windows were broken. Up town the tall office buildings were all shaken by the tremendous explosion.

Saw Bodies Hurled in Air.

Captain Austrey of the Alum Chine was in a ship chandler's office on south Broadway when the explosion occurred. He rushed into the street at once, and divining the cause took a launch and hurried to the scene.

Marshal Farnum sent all the city patrol ambulances to the foot of Broadway to meet the city's tug as she brought the bodies in. People on shore who saw the explosion declared that the wreckage of the Alum Chine was thrown hundreds of feet into the air and that the bodies of men were clearly discerned as they were catapulted from the vessel.

Rev. J. S. Prettyman of a Washington Methodist church was nominated for chaplain of the Senate.

ST. PETERSBURG, March 7.—It was unofficially stated that two of the most famous political exiles likely to come under the Czar's tercentenary amnesty are Prince Kropatkin and Maxim Gorky. All exiles pardoned will be under police supervision for two years after their return to Russia.

Prince Kropatkin once was a member of the Czar's corps of pages and held other high official positions. For connection with the movement for Russian freedom he was arrested and imprisoned, but escaped to England in 1874, where he since has lived. He was seventy years old last December.

COLLEGE GIRL RISKS LIFE FOR GRANDMOTHER

Miss Louise R. Ufford, a Simmons College pupil, saved her aged grandmother, Mrs. S. N. Ufford from being burned to death at their home, No. 240 Norfolk street, Dorchester, today. The girl's hands were blistered.

The grandmother, who is eighty years old, lighted a gas-log in her room at 7:30. She leaned over the lighted log and her apron caught fire. The flames flashed up, enveloping the grandmother and causing her to faint. The noise of her falling to the floor was heard by Miss Louise R. Ufford, who rushed into the room and saw Mrs. Ufford on the floor, with clothing afire. The girl called to Charles A. Ufford for help, and meanwhile snatched a blanket from the bed and wrapped it about her grandmother, and picking her up bodily placed her on the bed. Mrs. Ufford recovered consciousness soon and was little the worse for the shock. Miss Ufford's quickness had saved the grandmother from either inhaling the flames or getting her face and hands burned.

WOMEN STORM RUSSELL WILL COURTROOM

The corridor of the second floor of the Suffolk County Courthouse today was filled with women as at a bargain rush when the famous Russell will case was resumed before Master Pevey. Over fifty women were outside the courtroom long before the doors of the courtroom were opened.

Delay Hearing Until Noon.

Two court officers kept the women in line until the doors of the courtroom were opened.

When all the women and the men spectators were finally seated, Mrs. Joanna Russell was put on the witness stand in re-direct examination. She had been testifying only twenty minutes when the hearing was closed because Attorney Scharton, representing "Dakota Dan," was unable to be present. Adjournment was taken until 1 o'clock. Neither "Fresno" or "Dakota Dan" were in court today.

Mrs. Russell, who was on the stand, lives at Messina, New York. She was questioned by Attorney Eugene C. Upton for the Russell estate. She said that her maiden name was Miss Joanna Haig, before her marriage. She had two cousins whose names were Joanna Haig, but they both died, Mrs. Russell testified, while they were infants. Mrs. Russell also testified that she had an aunt named Joanna Haig but that she died forty years ago.

These were the only Joanna Haigs in the family, Mrs. Russell stated.

Sent Mail to "Joanna Haig."

The witness was put on today in re-direct examination because of evidence presented yesterday by Mr. Upton. He said that "Dakota Dan" told him in 1909 that he (Dakota Dan) had written letters to his mother before she died and that he always sent them to Joanna Haig, General Delivery, Boston.

At a previous hearing the Mrs. Russell who was on the stand today testified that s.. knew Dakota Dan as James D. Russell in St. Lawrence County, N. Y., back in 1885. She further testified that for three years he worked for her husband, Myron Russell, on his farm in the northern section of the Empire State. She had also testified that the Jim Russell she knew married Jessie Carlton. Miss Carlton was employed as a maid by the Mrs. Russell who testified at the brief session this morning.

The goods were found at the depot.

WILSON SETS NEW RECORD AS EARLY WORKER

WASHINGTON, March 7.—President Wilson held his third Cabinet meeting today and fulfilled more than 100 appointments made to shake hands with his well-wishers. He reached the executive offices at 8:25 o'clock, the earliest hour that a President ever got to work, according to the oldest employes of the White House.

Senators Culberson and Tillman, Representative J. J. Fitzgerald and former Governor Robert E. Glenn of North Carolina conferred with the President. Charles Murphy of New York headed a party of callers; Senator Ransdell of Louisiana led a detachment of Boy Scouts who aided in maintaining order on March 4, and a special train from San Salvador presented their credentials to the President and urged his immediate consideration of the Central American question.

On leaving the White House, Representative Fitzgerald stated that no business would be considered during the extra session of Congress other than tariff revision and the sundry civil appropriation bill vetoed by President Taft in the last half hour of his administration.

President Wilson, in conferring with Mr. Fitzgerald today, strongly advocated this plan as an effective measure to keep the attention of the public focussed on the tariff and to prevent the introduction by the Senate of any amendments which would nullify the work of the House.

Mr. Fitzgerald said that the appropriations committee, of which he is chairman, would begin work at once on the sundry civil bill, and that he hoped to have it in shape for passage before the opening of the extra session. A large number of letters reached the White House advocating the appointment of Mrs. Robert C. Wickcliffe, widow of Representative Wickcliffe of Louisiana, to be head of the Children's Bureau in place of Mrs. Julia C. Lathrop of Chicago.

To a number of visitors at the White House President Wilson indicated that he would advocate the passage of the sundry civil appropriation bill for the same reasons that President Taft vetoed it. He also indicated that he would support J. Hamilton Lewis in the Illinois Senatorial fight.

G. M. FISHER IS ADMITTED TO BAIL IN "DE LUXE" CASE

George M. Fisher of New York, under indictment by the Suffolk Grand Jury of larceny and conspiracy charges in the De Luxe book swindle case, was before Judge Edgar L. Sherman of the Superior Court today and admitted to bail in $2,500, a surety company furnishing the bond. Fisher was brought from New York last night by Inspector Silas Waitt of the Boston Police Department, having waived extradition. He is charged with larceny of $8,400 from Frederick G. Carnochan, a Harvard College student and "gold coaster," on November 8, 1912. The conspiracy charge involves the same amount and the complainant is the same.

Mayor Fitzgerald of Boston, with Mrs. Fitzgerald and their daughter Rose, arrived in Washington from Palm Beach today and, according to despatches from the national capital, will call on President Wilson before leaving for Boston Saturday night.

In an interview today Mayor Fitzgerald said he wanted it understood that he is not in Washington looking for patronage. The Mayor said:

"Before leaving Washington I'll see several Congressmen and Senators regarding the tariff situation, however. That's the thing that interests New England the most.

"I know absolutely nothing about patronage and will take no part in trying to land any positions."

Sohier Explains Friendly Thrust at Sam McCall

Colonel William D. Sohier of Beverly, chairman of the State Highway Commission, allowed today that his "good friend," former Congressman Samuel McCall, "didn't get around fast enough in politics."

Today's statement by the Colonel was in explanation of one he made last night while presiding at the twenty-fifth anniversary dinner of the Legislature of '88. The Colonel said that former Congressman McCall, an '88 legislator, had not answered the invitation to the dinner. Then the Colonel added:

"If Sam McCall had taken more pains about this sort of thing he would be a United States Senator from Massachusetts today."

This referred to the unsuccessful McCall campaign for the office now held by John W. Weeks. Colonel Sohier was asked today about this little verbal poke at McCall. He said:

"Sam McCall and I are perfectly good friends. I would like to see him United States Senator. What I meant was that he didn't get around fast enough in politics. It was not a formal gathering, anyhow, just a genial party."

PLAN TO RAISE $100,000,000 BY INCOME TAX

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Under the leadership of Representative Oscar W. Underwood of Alabama, whose slogan is "tariff for revenue only with incidental protection," the Democratic members of the House Ways and Means Committee went into session today to draft a tariff revision program to be presented to Congress at the coming special session.

A complete revision of all the schedules with changes in the administrative features of the present law and the enactment of an income tax bill are planned.

It is estimated that the income tax will yield $100,000,000 a year, but for the first year or two of its operation it may not yield half that amount. Mr. Underwood is determined that whatever tariff revision scheme is finally decided upon it must be so constructed that the government will be sure of sufficient revenues to pay its expenses.

The car, which was invented by R. H. Beach and built by an Edison company, arrived in Boston last night, after a trip of 310 miles, which was made from New York at the rate of forty miles an hour.

It was turned over to the Boston & Albany officials today and will be tested on a branch line running from Riverside to Newton Lower Falls. If the tests prove successful as the first one the company will purchase it, and it is expected that this style of traffic carrier will soon be in service generally.

In appearance the "Beach," as it is known, and which is now at the Exeter street station, resembles an electri car. The essential difference, however, is the fact that the wheels are free on the axles and rotate separately, the motor being attached to each wheel by a chain.

This device makes it possible to propel the car with one-half the energy that would otherwise be required. The batteries are in compartments under the floor and propel four motors of about eighty horsepower in all. The car weighs about 58,000 pounds, one-seventh of which is the weight of the batteries, and has a seating capacity of forty passengers. It also will carry freight.

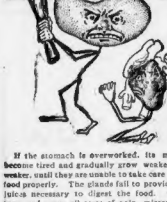
The run yesterday was the longest and fastest ever made by a storage battery car, and there was not a hitch from beginning to end. It was at first intended to proceed only as far as Hudson, about one hundred miles west of New York, but at this point the batteries were recharged and the trip continued to Chatham. The success of the run exceeded all expectations, so quietly did the car travel, the regulation speed of forty miles an hour.

From Chatham the run was continued to Springfield, where the batteries were again recharged, and the journey finished to Boston.

Gassy Stomach Endangers the Heart

Gas and Other Forms of Indigestion Are Quickly Relieved by Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Undigested food forms gas in the stomach, which causes the walls of that organ to expand and press against the heart. If this pressure should be allowed to become heavy it might result very seriously, as the heart must be kept perfectly free in order to perform its duties.



If the stomach is overworked, its muscle become tired and gradually grow weaker and weaker, until they are unable to take care of the food properly. The glands fail to provide the juices necessary to digest the food. Gases form and cause all sorts of pain, misery and wretchedness, as well as extreme danger to the heart.

It is then that the stomach calls for help. Ordinary medicines are impossible. They not only fail to help the stomach, but injure the entire system. Medical men have studied the stomach and have discovered that the digestive juices consist largely of pepsin, hydrochloric acid and nitrogenous ferments. What then, would be more natural than to supply these properties artificially when the stomach is unable to produce them?

That is the object of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets. These powerful little agents relieve the stomach of its burden, thereby giving it an opportunity to regain its normal strength. They tone up, strengthen and revitalize the secretory glands, mucous membranes, absorbing glands and muscular walls. They restore to the stomach its lost powers of digestion so that it can again do its work without assistance. They contain, in a concentrated form, every element necessary to digest all sorts of food, whether acid or alkaline.

If you experience an oppressive feeling just inside the lower end of your breast bone and extending upward towards your heart, do not hesitate an instant. Get Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets from the nearest druggist at once and take one. In a few minutes the pain will leave you and you will feel better. Take a tablet after each meal for several days and your stomach will once more perform its duties. All druggists sell them at 50c a box.

MISS EUGENIA B. FROTHINGHAM, a leader in the new "poster campaign" started by Back Bay society women against the liquor evil.

Back Bay society leaders have started a poster campaign against the liquor evil. The anti-liquor publicity crusade is a link in a "Think-it-over" series of posters to be distributed all over Boston. The "drink" poster makes this statement:

> Are You Up-to-date?
> Then of Course You Know
> That Liquor Is NOT Needed in > the Practice of Medicine.
> This Is the Latest Medical > Opinion.

Miss Eugenia B. Frothingham of No. 467 Beacon street, authoress and social leader, has paid for printing and circulating the first poster in this city and elsewhere. With her are associated on the Foster Committee Dr. Charles Putnam, Dr. John Eliot and Mrs. William Tilton. This committee believes that by this means of posters an educational campaign may be begun about the evils of drink among the laboring classes.

These posters will be issued regularly for five years. They will give pertinent facts about poverty, crime and disease. They are designed to set the average mind thinking and will aim to present facts and figures in such a way that they will appeal to all classes.

I am very glad to give the first poster to this campaign for educating the laboring classes to a knowledge Miss Frothingham, in an interview, said: of what drink does to them.

The grotesque results of liquor legislation in Maine show the folly of passing laws before public opinion is ready to insist upon their enforcement and it is wasted energy and hope for believers in temperance to go up to the State House and plead for the passing of anti-liquor laws until the large majority of people understand their importance.

The English laboring classes are more alive to the danger of drink than are the American laboring classes. In England, between 1890 and 1910, the growth of total abstainers among working men is reported as being 840,000.

The time has come when the man whose physical machine is the one thing between himself and starvation should have a chance of learning to what extent alcohol is its enemy.

Unfortunately the idea of educating public opinion in this direction is not new. I say unfortunately, because the education has too often been undertaken by the uneducated and in a way brought ridicule upon the movement.

Many investigators have disproved many current beliefs in the "beneficent" action of alcohol.

It is known that it does not relieve fatigue, but merely renders us unconscious of it. It helps us neither to endurance of exertion nor extreme cold. Amundsen has given up carrying it upon his sledging expeditions in the polar regions. Hospitals have given up its use for the sick. Med training for athletic sports must give it up before a trainer will undertake to train them. I think that when the working man realizes that drink is his worst enemy, the destroyer of his health and economic wellbeing, he will give it up.

Also when the State realizes that large proportions of its evil and consequent economic waste are the results of liquor I think that men of the State will come to feel that it is not worth while.

Crime, insanity, illness, poverty, degeneration and the social evil are expensive things and the elimination of strong drink, such as brandy, whiskey, gin, etc., will do away with a large proportion of them.

BACHELOR GIRLS WANT PROPOSAL RIGHT IF TAXED

Boston's bachelor maids—not all, but some of them—discussing Mrs. Frank Page's suggestion that they be taxed $5 a year by the State, say they wouldn't mind it IF—

Women and girls are allowed to propose.

This means that the "bachelor girls" want every year made matrimonially the same as leap year under the law. Many of Boston's married women agree with the bachelor maids. They believe in equal rights for women, whether it be in courtship or the ballot. But as a general proposition they don't favor Mrs. Page's suggestion.

This is what Miss Agnes E. Ryan, manager of the Woman's Journal, suggests:

It is worth more than $5 for many girls to remain single. Tax the single women, if it must be, and treat them equally with the bachelor men, if needs must. Then allow the women to propose and more especially permit them to vote.

Miss Alice Hunter, clerk of the Massachusetts Woman Suffrage Association, said:

"I think that many men wilfully remain bachelors, but I do not think the same is true of girls. I am a bachelor woman but through any fault of my own.

Miss Alice Stone Blackwell, the suffrage leader, said:

I do not believe that either bachelors or spinsters should be taxed by the State. It is a matter of personal preference whether they marry or not. What I would like to see is a widow's pension law, so that poor mothers may keep their families together with State or municipal assistance.

Mrs. Susan W. Fitzgerald said:

Bachelor girls are already heavily taxed. What is needed is a bill calling for equal pay for equal work. The economical and industrial situation already taxes the girl enough. Meanwhile the question of taxing spinsterhood is humorous. Until we have a universal system of equal pay to the sexes there is no sense in approaching the marriage question from any fictitious angle like taxing single men and women.

MOTHERHOOD JOY TO ETHEL BARRYMORE

NEW YORK, March 7.—"Motherhood is the greatest joy of a woman's life. I would give up the greatest career in the world if the career meant giving up my children."

Beautiful Ethel Barrymore, wife of Russell G. Colt, and one of the most beloved of American actresses, made this remark as she talked to an AMERICAN reporter in her home, No. 29 East Sixty-first street.

And no wonder Mrs. Colt feels as she does. Two lovelier children would be hard to find anywhere. The boy, just three years and three months old, has been named after his grandfather, Samuel P. Colt. The girl of eight months has been named for her mother, Ethel Barrymore Colt.

"You believe that the faculties and powers of an emotional actress are unimpaired by matrimony?" she was asked.

"Certainly I do. This talk one hears occasionally from professional actresses without children that motherhood takes away from art is all nonsense," she replied, and then continued:

Like love which grows and is always capable of being greater and finer, so motherhood gives a woman on the stage a greater appreciation of life and a clearer interpretation of it.

With a maternal instinct, which is always large in women of temperament, brought to its full realization, the actress becomes greater in her profession and finer in all phases of her life as a woman. I never knew what a beautiful thing life really was until I had my babies and my love for them makes my love for the whole world finer and stronger.

You must see our Sammy; if he isn't like a little flower out of a garden, then you have no imagination.

She opened the nursery door and brought in the little boy. Sure enough, like a slender, sun-kissed blossom was the boy, with his bright blue eyes, which matched his blue linen blouse. He has the serious, searching look in his eyes which brings the Ethel Barrymore of the stage vividly to one's mind. Then Mrs. Colt said:

Now what is the stage; what are honors or glory that might come to a woman in comparison to this baby boy? They are absolutely nothing, and it makes me very unhappy when I see so many women who might have the great joy that has been given to me if only they would. How different their lives might be. How much more happiness might be theirs if they would have children.

ETHEL BARRYMORE COLT, who says motherhood is a far greater career than success upon the stage.

BROCK TALKS ON MATERNITY FOR TEACHERS

Chairman George E. Brock of the Boston school board, commenting upon the case of Mrs. Frank D. Eagell, the New York school teacher who asked a year's leave of absence to give birth to a child, said today that the policy of the Boston school board is such that a similar condition could not arise here. He agrees with the New York Board of Education that a woman considering motherhood should resign her position.

The policy of the Boston board is such that every married woman teacher is dependent upon her earnings—that is, her husband is not able bodied, or else she is a widow or a divorcee. In case a woman living apart from her husband becomes reconciled to him and takes up her abode with him again, she must resign.

Mrs. Edgell's case comes up for a second hearing before the New York school board Wednesday. Her first application for a year's leave of absence was turned down and she appealed to the High School committee, which favored her request. She teaches in the Erasmus High School, as does her husband, and gives instruction in physical training.

BUST OF GOETHE GIVEN BY GERMAN

BALTIMORE, March 7.—The Grand Duke of Weimar, through Count von Bernstorff, German ambassador to the United States, will present a life-sized bust of Goethe, the German poet philosopher, to Johns Hopkins University on Monday. Some time ago a communication was received from the Grand Duke in which he offered the figure, and the trustees accepted it.

CAN REVITALIZE AND AID NATURE'S MANY RESOURCES

"Following my custom of publishing voluntary statements of users of Tona Vita, I selected today that of Wm. Sullivan, 10 Laurel street, Boston, who stated:

"I had been in poor health for some time until I used of Tona Vita and tried a bottle and it did me a world of good. I was awfully nervous and all ran down, but it has taken away that trouble from me and I feel like a new man. I am only too glad to recommend this tonic."

"Mr. Sullivan found that his health was improved in every way owing to the fact that Tona Vita gives strength to the body and vitalizes the resources of nature," said John Stanley Webb.

"Tona Vita is in the hands of all of the leading druggists of Boston. Nervous debility may be detected by any one of the following symptoms: Depression of spirits, sick headaches, heavy feeling about the bowels, poor complexion, or a feeling of being run down and nervous."

GIVE GARMENT GIRLS FAIR TREATMENT, WOMEN DEMAND OF THE POLICE

the most important developments in the garment workers' strike to date. It is expected to lead to drastic action.

It will undoubtedly hasten the public inquiry demanded concerning the alleged misconduct of certain policemen.

7,000 More May Go Out.

The latest complication in strike circles today was the announcement that 1,000 alteration workers are expected to join the garment workers.

This would bring the total to 13,500 men, women and girls now fighting for higher wages in Boston.

The Alteration Workers' Union is affiliated with the International Skirt, Cloak and Shirt Waist Makers' Union, whose ranks were swelled yesterday by 3,000 cloakmakers, mostly men who struck in forty-five shops.

Woman Striker Arrested.

Molly Kestleman, twenty-two, of No. 93 Poplar street, West End, a striking garment worker, was arrested shortly before 9 o'clock at the corner of Edinboro and Essex streets by two officers of the Lagrange street station. According to the police, she attacked a woman not a striker-breaker. The woman was walking along the street when Molly took her by the arm, the police say. The woman broke away and Molly followed, grabbing her again. A tussle ensued and the police put Molly under arrest. The woman fled in the crowd.

Miss Kestleman was bailed out shortly after by Attorney John Connoly, official bail commissioner for the strikers.

So much interest is being manifested in the meeting to be held in Faneuil Hall tonight that the Women's Trade Union League hired a big touring car and had placed on it a canvas banner erected in it. Five striking shirt waist makers, all of them girls in their teens, braved the cold today for the good of the cause by riding all over the city in the automobile which advertised the mass meeting.

The automobile squad consisted of the Misses Clara Butts, Fannie Schwartz, Rose Tay, Annie Kassman and Annie Mann. They were under the escort of Miss Alma Welsner, who represented the Women's Trade Union League. The upright of canvas bore this announcement on both sides:

COME TO FANEUIL HALL TONIGHT
We Are
Shirt Waist Makers
Ready to Tell You
The Story of the Strike.

It was anything but pleasant sitting in that car with the cutting winds chilling them to the bone, but the girls pulled the blankets around them as snugly as possible and defied the cold for hours, feeling that they were merely doing their mite.

Mrs. Dewey Hits O'Meara.

Mrs. Dewey says that the Police Commissioner is himself "very much to blame because he sent officers in plain clothing to patrol the strike districts."

Through the work of Mrs. Dewey it is stated that complaints will later be lodged with Commissioner O'Meara against ten other Boston policemen. These cases do not include the three East Boston patrolmen accused in the list of charges to be filed today with the Commissioner.

George E. Roewer, Jr., counsel for some of the garment strikers, who has preferred charges against three East Boston policemen, said today:

"The conduct of the police in the East Boston disturbances two weeks ago was outrageous. Offending officers should be reprimanded. The only way to call them to account is by lodging complaints with Commissioner O'Meara.

I have prepared complaints against Patrolmen Charles E. Gallagher, Patrick Hickey and James J. Driscoll, because of their conduct in the East Boston affair. The police in that and other instances have been cruel, unfair and flagrantly discriminating."

Mrs. Dewey said she was certain the strikers would win their cause and win without much further delay.

"BOSTON GIRLS WILL WIN," SAYS MISS BARNUM

By ANGELA MORGAN.

"The Lord helps those who help themselves. The garment strikers of Boston are relying upon themselves, and they are bound to win!"

Smiling, and in the very best of vigorous spirits, Miss Gertrude Barnum, on her arrival from New York, uttered this greeting and prophecy combined. She had just come from the train, and had gone with Miss Josephine Casey to the Quincy House, where both are staying.

Miss Barnum, fresh from the great triumph of the New York garment workers, has come to Boston to speak at the meeting in Faneuil Hall tonight and to take active part in the strike here. Miss Barnum is the daughter of Judge Barnum of Chicago and general organizer of the International Ladies' Garment Workers' Union. Her career as a social worker dates from the time she gave up society to enter settlement work. She was connected with Hull House and other organizations. Then came her conversion to trades unionism and her vigorous campaign in that cause.

"There are all the elements of a successful termination in this Boston strike," Miss Barnum declared. "The strikers themselves are in the best possible state of mind, and then, as I said, they are relying on themselves.

Urges State Proctocol Here.

"Then, too, the success of the strike in New York cannot but encourage the workers here. It isn't as if a new path had to be blazed. The way is already marked out.

"I hope every State and every city will have the splendid protocol, or State agreement, such as we have won in New York. Under this remarkable settlement provision is made for industrial courts, instead of lockouts and strikes. There will be no need in the future for the strikes of today if this document is lived up to.

"It seems to me the State of Massachusetts offers a fine battleground for the strikers, for here you have your recently established minimum wage."

"What do you think of the demands of the strikers, as compared with those in New York, and of the general comparison of situations here and there?"

"The strikers here have certainly every opportunity for winning, even as we did there. Their demands are clear-cut and their attitude strong and fine. I know they will come out victorious."

Wants Democracy in Industry.

"Do you think the attitude of the public is such as to prove a help to the strikers?"

"The public has grown to realize that there must be democracy in industry. I think the public certainly feels that truth. There is much to be said about this in its effect upon the cause. Public psychology has its influence upon the people at this time. When any large body of people make a brave stand for principle the result is sure to be felt in the change of public opinion."

Young Astor Opens Crop Campaign by Advertising Oats

POUGHKEEPSIE, N. Y., March 7.—Vincent Astor has begun the agricultural regeneration of Dutchess County, the seat of his ancestral estate. Ferncliffe Farms, which he recently promised Governor Sulzer would be turned into an experimental station, advertised White Tartar seed oats, "guaranteed to improve the crop in Dutchess County," at $1.25 a bushel.

Old farmers say young Mr. Astor has shown good judgment in the selection of the first neighborhood crop to be improved. Oats in Dutchess County rarely grow over three feet in height, and the heads are scanty and the kernels thin. The Astor advertisement guarantees "five-foot straw with long heads and thick, plump, heavy kernels."

DON'T SCOLD AN IRRITABLE CHILD

If Tongue Is Coated, Stomach Sour, Breath Feverish, Give "Syrup of Figs" to Clean the Bowels.

Your child isn't naturally cross, irritable and peevish. Mother! Examine its tongue; if coated, it means the little one's stomach is disordered, liver inactive and its three feet of bowels clogged with foul, decaying waste.

Every mother realizes after giving delicious "Syrup of Figs" that this is the ideal laxative and physic for children. Nothing else regulates the little one's tender stomach, liver and bowels so effectually, besides they dearly love its delightful fig taste.

For constipated bowels, sluggish liver, biliousness, or sour, disordered stomach, feverishness, diarrhoea, sore throat, bad breath or to break a cold, give one-half to a teaspoonful of "Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up waste, sour bile, undigested food and constipated matter will gently move on and out of the system without griping or nausea, and you will surely have a well, happy and smiling child again shortly.

With Syrup of Figs you are not drugging your children, being composed entirely of luscious figs, senna and aromatics it cannot be harmful.

Full directions for children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly printed on the package.

25 CENT "DANDERINE" FOR FALLING HAIR AND DANDRUFF---GROWS HAIR

Thin, brittle, colorless and scraggy hair is mute evidence of a neglected scalp; of dandruff—that awful scurf. There is nothing so destructive to the hair as dandruff. It robs the hair of its lustre, its strength and its very life; eventually producing a feverishness and itching of the scalp, which, if not remedied, causes the hair roots to shrink, loosen and die—then the hair falls out fast.

A little Danderine tonight—now—any time—will surely save your hair. Get a 25-cent bottle of Knowlton's Danderine from any drug store or toilet counter, and after the first application you will say it was the best investment you ever made. Your hair will immediately take on that life, lustre and lustriance which is so beautiful. It will become wavy and fluffy and have the appearance of abundance; an incomparable gloss and softness, but what will please you most will be after just a few weeks' use, when you will actually see a lot of fine, downy hair—new hair—growing all over the scalp.

CASSIDY DISCUSSES PORTLAND PURE FOOD SHOW, AND DR. WOODS

Mr. Cassidy today discusses the Portland Pure Food Exposition, which opened last Wednesday in the New City Hall Auditorium, and which will continue until March 15. Mr. Cassidy is to speak at the fair on the evening of March 14.

This exposition has instituted an innovation. Most food fairs have all foods to be exhibited in the fair tested either by a chemist or by women connected with the fair. But in Portland the foods are tested by State authorities, under the State laws.

By HARRY P. CASSIDY.

I have been interested in the result of the innovation, inaugurated by the management of the Portland Pure Food Exposition, now in progress in the New City Hall Auditorium.

So far as I know, in other food shows it has been the practice to have all foods to be exhibited tested by a chemist, often Professor Lewis B. Allyn of Westfield, or one of his assistants —or by women connected with the management of the show.

But in Portland the tests have been made by Charles Dayton Woods, head of the chemistry department of the Maine food bureau, and by his assistant, Dr. Ora Willis Knight.

Dr. Woods is well qualified for his work. The show has opened with every prospect of success, as a result largely of his efforts.

Dr. Woods is a graduate of Wesleyan University. He has taught chemistry and other sciences. He was chemist and vice-director of the Storrs Agricultural Experiment Station for eight years, and since 1896 has been connected with the Maine department, doing work for the United States government at the same time.

What Dr. Woods Has Done.

For two years before coming to Maine Dr. Woods was associated with Professor Atwater in the investigation work regarding human foods and their nutrivity value, which was being carried on under the direction of the United States government, and under his supervision the same work was carried on at the Maine Experimental Station for several years.

The first law passed in Maine for the protection of the consumers and to insure pure foods was a fertilizer law which was to insure that plants were supplied with pure and suitable foods, and this law had been in force for several years before Dr. Woods came to Maine. At Dr. Woods' initiative the Legislature of 1897 passed a law entitled "An act to regulate the sale and analysis of Concentrated Commercial Feeding Stuffs," which was essentially an act providing for the inspection and analysis of the higher priced stock feeds, or, in other words, was to insure that livestock were provided with pure and nourishing food.

In 1897 at his initiative the Legislature passed a law regulating the sale of agricultural seeds, which was in effect a measure to insure the farmer should get seed of known purity.

Laws on Sale of Foods.

After repeated efforts on the part of Dr. Woods, the Legislature in 1905 finally enacted a law to regulate the sale and analysis of foods. This law applied to "Every article used for food or drink by man, horses or cattle." It will be noted that it did not apply to drugs or medicines.

In 1907 the Maine law was changed to cover "Any article of food or drink which is adulterated or misbranded within the meaning of this act."

In 1911 the Legislature enacted new laws regulating the sale of agricultural seeds, commercial feeding stuffs, commercial fertilizers, drugs, foods, fungicides and insecticides, Chapter 110, Public Laws of 1911. This law defined the conditions under which these various substances could be sold or offered or exposed for sale, defined adulterations and embraced in its far-reaching features a sanitary clause, Maine being among the first States to have a really strong sanitary inspection.

The sanitary section of the law provides: "For the purpose of this act an article shall be deemed to be adulterated —In the case of food—if in the manufacture, sale, distribution, transportation or in the offering or exposing for sale, distribution or transportation, it is not at all times securely protected from filth, flies, dust or other contamination, or other unclean, unhealthful or unsanitary conditions."

Due Largely to Woods.

That Maine has such laws for the protection of her citizens is in a great measure due to the initiative measures of Dr. Woods.

Under his direction, a great amount of work has been done relating to conditions in every grade of store, and relating to all food products of every kind and nature manufactured within the State or shipped into it. Much attention has been given to the conditions under which foods are handled, which has resulted in great benefit to the merchants and consuming public.

A little story is told which shows the conditions that existed when Dr. Woods took up the fight: A Mrs. M. called into the store run by Mr. C. The usual morning salutation being given, Mrs. M. looked over the bakery counter and got her eye on a certain pie, and said: "Mr. C., how much is your blueberry pie?" Mr. C. turned and shook his hand over the pie and shooed the flies away, and turned back to Mrs. M. and said: "That is not a blueberry pie, Mrs. M., that is custard."

Miss Edith H. McAlpine, president of the Portland Civic Club, which gives the show, has been largely responsible for its success. Other active workers are: Mrs. Charles J. Nichols, Mrs. Rufus Horton Jones, Frederick B. Boothby, Carl W. Smith, Mrs. John F. Thompson, Mrs. Jesse O. Rice, Mrs. Henry True Hooper, Mrs. Charles C. Harmon, and a long list of progressive and earnest men and women interested in the fight for pure foods.

IMMIGRANT AN ASSET TO STATE, DECLARES TUPPER

"The immigrant is not a menace; he is an asset to the Commonwealth," declared George W. Tupper, immigration secretary of the Y. M. C. A. of Massachusetts and Rhode Island, at the legislative luncheon of the Boston Equal Suffrage Association, held at No. 3 Joy street. "The asset the immigrant brings is not his brawn, but his dream of life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness." His position is akin to that of one boasted Pilgrim Fathers," he added.

Sues Agent She Says Jilted Her for Old Friend

Claiming that Israel Novoselsky, a Boston real estate operator, had jilted her after she had given him a large sum of money to start in business with, Miss Rose Liberman of No. 20 Laconia street, through her attorney, has attached his property to the amount of $10,000 for alleged breach of promise. According to her attorney, Novoselsky kept company with Miss Liberman for nearly six years. The attorney said:

"Miss Liberman and Novoselsky were to have been married the latter part of last year, but Novoselsky met another girl who recently came to this country. They knew each other in Novoselsky's home town."

NECK BROKEN 2 YEARS, BOY JUST FINDS IT OUT

NORTH ADAMS, March 7.—Oliver Roberts, an eighteen-year-old schoolboy, has just discovered that he has been going about with a broken neck for the last two years. He was hurt playing football, and recently his neck began to cause him pain.

A physician found the sixth cervical vertebra dislocated, if not fractured, several inches of the upper part of the spine out of place and the first rib in the right side drawn up at an angle by the pull of the muscles and forming a hard lump at the base of the right side of the neck.

An X-ray examination disclosed conditions in accord with the doctor's diagnosis. Two more X-ray examinations will be made, and it is possible that the case will be called to the attention of a specialist.

Save Union Park Trees at Protest From Residents

The trees on Union Park are to be spared. Heeding letters from property owners protesting against the cutting down of the trees to make way for the new sewer, the sewer department will see to it that the trees are protected as much as possible.

E. S. Dorr and D. Henry Sullivan, in charge of the work, said they would have the public grounds department take charge of the trees and protect them.

The trees in Union Park are among the prettiest in the city. Governor John A. Andrew and Governor Alexander H. Rice lived in the park at one time.

High Cost of Living Hits Harvard and Meal Tickets Jump

It's a case of the high cost of eating at Harvard.

With everything else going up, including higher education, the high cost of living has hit Harvard in first blow. Other uppercuts may follow, but the starter came in the announcement of a 10 per cent. increase in the cost of meals to the students at the Dunster Cafeteria. The restaurant is patronized by more than 500 Harvard men daily.

The proprietor of the Cafeteria, Charles A. Holt, has announced that there will be no more meal tickets sold to the students the rate of $5.50 worth of edibles for $5. Hereafter the students must pay $5 for $5 worth of food. Mr. Holt stated that within the past month the prices of food had advanced 15 per cent. His advance is 5 per cent. less than the increased cost to himself.

Memorial and Fenerolf Halls, where about 2,000 students eat, have not advanced their prices.

FURNACE TOO HOT, SETS HOUSE AFIRE

Fire started by an overheated furnace did about $50 damage in the basement of the four-story house at No. 123 Pembroke street, South End, today. Mrs. Clara E. Price discovered the fire and turned in an alarm. Then she aroused eight other tenants who were asleep.

FLAMES DRIVE FAMILY FROM WINTHROP HOME

Fire early today in the two and one-half story wooden residence occupied by Henry H. Reed No. 61 Sewell street, Winthrop, did damage estimated at $3,000 and drove Mr. Reed, his wife and mother out into the bitter cold and terrific wind clad only in their night clothes. They found shelter in a neighbor's house.

Reed was awakened at 2:30 a. m. by smoke. Discovering flames burning briskly in the attic, he roused the rest of the family. They lingered collecting valuables until the fire laddies arrived and drove them out. The flames burned through the roof and down the inside walls. The cause is unknown.

FACE DISFIGURED WITH PIMPLES

Used to Itch Like Anything. Could Not Sleep Nights but Little. Used Cuticura Soap and Ointment Two Months and Was Cured.

31 Warren St., New Haven, Conn.—"Pimples began to come about my face. They were the size of a cherry and they used to itch like anything. That kept me scratching them. They disfigured my face and it was full of small holes. I could not sleep nights but little. I began to use ——— but without any effect, and I also began to use ———, but the pimples came out worse.

"One day while reading I saw the advertisement of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and after I used one cake of Cuticura Soap and one box of Cuticura Ointment I saw some difference. I used the Cuticura Soap and Ointment for two months and I am cured." (Signed) D. Mascola, Aug. 10, 1912.

RASH ALL OVER BABY'S BODY

47 Green St., Stoneham, Mass.—"When my baby was three months old he got a rash on his face and all over his body. The eruption was scattered and I had to keep bathing him all the time to give him ease. It disfigured him while it lasted and he lost rest at night and was fretful. So I read about the sample of Cuticura Soap and Ointment and at the third application he was getting ease. I bought some more. Cuticura Soap and Ointment had him clear in two weeks." (Signed) Mrs. Margurita Deveney, Oct. 14, 1912.

Cuticura Soap 25c. and Cuticura Ointment 50c. are sold everywhere. Liberal sample of each mailed free, with 32-p. Skin Book, on address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. T, Boston."

BIG PROTEST OVER MORMON CRUSADE HERE

The Rev. James A. Francis, D. D., pastor of the Clarendon street Baptist Church, wants a halt called upon the Mormons and their tactics in this city.

He says the great heart of the American people will respond with a mighty protest against their teaching.

He has talked to Mormon elders in Massachusetts and has heard from their own lips that they believe in polygamy and even teach it. Their system of belief is considered very injurious to the student life of the Back Bay, where they are working.

Resolution of Protest.

A meeting of protest will soon be called to prevent Mormon elders hiring halls for the purpose of defending polygamy. They have hired a hall at No. 200 Huntington avenue for two months.

An effort was made by Mormon elders under the guise of students of Institute of Technology to hire a hall in the Pierce Building, but they were refused.

A resolution of protest against the tactics of the Mormons will be offered at the meeting to be held in the Park Street Church under the auspices of the Evangelical Alliance of Boston, Monday, March 17. This alliance is composed of every minister in Greater Boston.

Dr. Francis' Statement.

Dr. Francis said, in an interview:

"I would be the last man to engage in any religious persecution, but when people preach and practice that which is destructive of common morality, it is time to call a halt.

"Let us judge Mormonism out of its own mouth. Mormons declare that they believe in polygamy. Mormon elders have so declared to me personally.

"Now it is up to the American people to say whether they want this teaching or practice that will destroy the foundations of the home.

"I believe that the great heart of the American people will immediately respond with mighty protests."

Elder Frank Brown, whose wife was found teaching Mormonism in a Back Bay school and told to leave, has written to "Latthena the Elders' Journal," published at Independence, Mo.:

"We are doing great work for the cause here in Boston. In a school which Sister Brown recently attended she was told by the leading teacher that she had by her example lifted Mormon people high in her estimation, and it was no wonder that Mormonism was creating such a stir in the nation today, as the Mormons are, according to Boston, a wonderful people."

BURKE WINNER AT BROOKLINE POLLS

Timothy J. Burke is again water commissioner in Brookline, after one of the keenest electoral fights in the history of the town. Burke was defeated for nomination at the Citizens' Committee caucus, but ran independently and snowed under George H. Hooper, the committee's nominee, at the rate of three to one.

The Selectmen for the year will be Walter J. Ustick, Payson Dana, Philip S. Parker, William Craig and Ernest B. Dane. The first three are old members of the board and all five were backed by the Citizens' committee. The no-license vote was increased by over 200 votes.

'L'ARLESIENNE,' BY DAUDET, AT OPERA HOUSE

By FREDERICK JOHNS.

If there is an artistic and cultured colony in Boston, where was it last night, when an extremely interesting and elaborate production of Daudet's "L'Arlesienne" was given at the Opera House with a fine company and full orchestra?

Evidently a Sarah Bernhardt is necessary to attract Boston society and Boston masses to a French play, for a mere handful assembled.

The full orchestra of the Boston Opera, directed by Caplet, was in the pit and played the celebrated incidental music which Bizet, the composer of "Carmen," wrote for this drama. The company, headed by P. Paul Marcel and Marguerite Zegarra, are originally from France, but have been playing all season in Canada.

The drama is, of course, famous. It is the story of a mother's devotion to a son who became entangled with a woman unworthy of him and his family. Its lines are eloquent, as Daudet could make them, and its situations gripping, dramatic.

Marcel is a capable actor, although more prone to exaggerated outbursts than the modern French actor. Zegarra as the mother, Rose Mamai, was intensely realistic. Even those who did not understand French had no difficulty in following her through her emotional wanderings. Her voice was rich and expressive, and her countenance a mirror of feeling.

Benedict, Dumeurier, Lenrs, Marcell and Morelli were all striking examples of the faithfulness of French art to nature.

The music of "L'Arlesienne" has been much admired, but to me it seems unworthy of the author of "Carmen." It is trivial, sickly sweet music, music that is only incidental, as Bizet undoubtedly intended it to be. It did not get a perfect performance, although Mr. Caplet never worked harder.

DE WOLF HOPPER, as Reginald Bunthorne in "Patience" at the Majestic Theatre.

HOPPER, EVER YOUNG, SHINES IN 'PATIENCE'

There are two things about De Wolf Hopper which are constant problems of discussion—his attitude, and, as it were, his longevity.

After one has seen him in the various and varied roles which he essays, not to say assumes, in the Gilbert and Sullivan operas in which he is appearing at the Majestic Theatre this week, one DOES wonder how old he really is and speculates as to his height.

Not that he wishes to confuse or mystify his admirers—no, no, not at all, not at all.

When approached on these very personal, and, in a measure, delicate subjects, he is most frank, exceedingly frank, as it were.

He is just six feet two inches tall.

And he pleads guilty to fifty-five years. "But," says he, "remember, I am the discoverer of inextinguishable youth."

Which brings us down to the point that last evening Mr. Hopper appeared in the youthful role of Reginald Bunthorne, a languishing and aesthetic poet in the opera, "Patience."

"Patience" is perhaps one of the least widely known of the Gilbert and Sullivan productions, and has been accused of lacking the absorbing interest of their better-known works.

However, it must be admitted that it is not without musical merit, and that some of the airs are most attractive.

Mr. Hopper gave free rein to his drollery, and was called out for his usual curtain speech, long recognized as an institution and part of the regular program of his appearance.

Some have wondered at his temerity in tampering with the Gilbert and Sullivan manuscript to the extent of interpolating some encore lines of his own, but it did seem last evening that they were greatly appreciated by the audience, and it is presumed that he will be forgiven by those who hold the authors' rights sacred.

George J. MacFarlane as Archibald Grosvenor, a rival of Reginald, was in excellent voice and quite equalled Mr. Hopper in the vigorous which these two "old-timers" were forced to assume.

Eugene Cowles, as Major Murgatroyd, atoned for his slightly overtaxed voice by the cleverness of his portrayal. The extra matinee of yesterday, together with the double appearance of the previous day, imposed quite a severe tax on all the company.

Blanche Duffield appeared as the sweet and attractive milkmaid, Patience. The rest of the cast included Arthur Cunningham and Arthur Aldridge as officers, and Viola Gillette, Louise Bartlet, Grace Lyon and the irrepressible Kate Condon as the love-sick ladies.

Tonight the bill will be a repetition of "The Pirates of Penzance."

PROVIDENCE MAYOR CALLS GRAND TRUNK

PROVIDENCE, March 7.—Denouncing Morgan's "absolute monopoly of railroad traffic in New England," Mayor Gainer says that people of Providence and the State of Rhode Island should not let the chance slip by to investigate fully the Grand Trunk's offer to provide competition. The Mayor, in addressing the Improved Order of Heptasophs, said:

When the committee which was appointed by the Legislature to investigate the offer of the Grand Trunk proposed to drop the proposition without investigation at a meeting the other day I opposed the action. I have opposed such action since then and I oppose it now.

The city of Providence and the State of Rhode Island need traffic competition on land, and while I do not say that we should accept the offer of Mr. Chamberlin, I do say that the people of the city and of the State should not let this chance slip by to investigate the proposition offered for competition.

If the valuation of the Grand Trunk in itself is not sufficient security for the State of Rhode Island to act as a fourth guarantor of a bond issue the people would do right in rejecting it; but if we are to be deprived of competition because Mr. Morgan does not wish to give up his absolute monopoly of railroad traffic in New England, then I say it is the solemn duty of the people to do all in their power to secure the competition in any way that is offered if the the proposition is deemed safe.

Whatever we may do, it is the only reasonable to say that we would be unjust to ourselves and to those who make the offer if we were to reject the offer of the Grand Trunk without having first investigated it to its depths.

WHAT IS GOOD TO EAT TODAY IN MARKETS

"Pigs is pigs," as Expressman Flannery said, in the Boston markets and any portion of a pig is costing more and more from day to day. Ham is now selling for twenty-eight and thirty cents a pound for slices and eighteen to twenty-one cents for whole hams. Bacon is selling for twenty-five to twenty-eight cents, fresh pork for twenty cents and pork chops for twenty-five cents.

Beef prices have not varied greatly during the past week. Rump steak sells for forty to forty-five cents, tenderloins for forty-five to fifty, sirloins for twenty-eight to thirty-three, loin roasts for twenty-five to thirty-five and rump roasts for twenty-three to forty.

Butter continues high priced, though there is no great scarcity. Western butter sells for thirty-seven cents and northern for forty-two.

Fish conditions cheap and plentiful. The fishermen have been having good weather for three weeks, with the exception of last Sunday and good fares have brought prices to a low level for Lent.

Asparagus from Florida and Southern California is coming in slowly and high prices obtain. The best California stalks cost $1.50 a bunch and the cheapest Florida stalks cost half that sum.

Strawberries are quite plentiful, but poor in quality for the most part. Good berries cost forty and fifty cents, and poorer ones twenty-five to thirty-five cents a box.

Lobsters are scarce and the few that arrive from day to day are snapped up by eager dealers for hotel and restaurant trade. In the retail markets good lobsters sell for forty-five cents a pound alive and fifty cents boiled.

Sweet potatoes are becoming more plentiful. They sell for five cents a pound.

Oranges are growing scarcer because of the shortage of navels due to the freeze in Southern California during the mid-winter frosts. Good oranges cost from fifty to seventy-five cents a dozen.

AUTOS IN COLLISION; 3 NARROW ESCAPES

Three men had a narrow escape from death or serious injury when two automobiles collided on Lamartine street, corner of Mozart street, Jamaica Plain, while both were traveling at high speed. One of the cars was overturned and all three men were thrown out. The accident was unusual because of the fact that, though the autos were traveling at a rapid rate, none of the occupants was hurt.

Dr. H. S. Rowen of No. 30 Bennett street, Brighton, was responding in his car to a hurry call, when the automobile operated by Carl J. Johnson, of No. 304 Queens avenue, Dorchester, and owned by H. W. Waldorf, ran into Dr. Rowen's car and overturned it.

HALLETT GIVES UP DAIRY TO RAISE HAY

GRAFTON, March 7.—D. E. Hallett, owner of the famous Brightside dairy and stock farm on Keith Hill, has announced that he will sell his herd of thoroughbred cattle, give up the dairy business and in the future raise hay on his farm of 200 acres. Mr. Hallet says there is no profit in the dairy business and hereafter he will keep but one cow. He bought the farm for a home after looking all over New England.

TOWN THREATENED BY FIRE; ONE DEAD

MONTGOMERY, N. Y., March 7.—Fire which broke out early today threatened the destruction of the village. The Palace Hotel, the high school, the Presbyterian church and several dwellings were on fire at one time, with a high wind fanning the flames. At least one life has been lost. With aid of firemen from Goshen and Walden the fire was brought under control. The loss is $50,000.

SLEEP-DISTURBING BLADDER WEAKNESS BACKACHE-RHEUMATISM, QUICKLY VANISH

Even Most Chronic Sufferers Find Relief After a Few Doses Are Taken.

Backache, urinary disorders, and rheumatism, are caused from weak, inactive kidneys, which fail to filter out the impurities and keep the blood pure, and the only way on earth to permanently and positively cure such troubles is to remove the cause.

The new discovery, Croxone, cures such conditions, because it reaches the very roots of the disease. It soaks right into the stopped up, inactive kidneys, through the walls and linings; cleans out the vile, offending cells and glands; neutralizes and dissolves the poisonous uric acid substances that lodge in the joints and muscles to scratch and irritate and cause rheumatism; it neutralizes the urine so it no longer irritates the tender membranes of the bladder, and cleans out and strengthens the stopped up, lifeless kidneys so they filter and sift all the poisons from the blood, and drive it out of the system.

So sure, so positive, so quick and lasting, are the results obtained from the use of Croxone, that three doses a day for a few days are often all that is required to cure the worst case of backache, regulate the most annoying bladder disorders, and overcome the numerous other similar conditions.

It is the most wonderful preparation ever made for the purpose. It is entirely different from all other remedies. There is nothing else on earth to compare with it. If it is so prepared that it is practically impossible to take it into the human system without results.

You can obtain an original package of Croxone at trifling cost from any druggists drug store. All druggists are authorized to personally return the purchase price if Croxone fails to give desired results, regardless of how old you are, how long you have suffered, or what else has failed to cure you.

COUGHLIN BACKS WILSON'S PLAN ON PATRONAGE

Dr. John W. Coughlin of Fall River, Democratic National Committeeman from Massachusetts, looks for a conservative, businesslike handling of the government's affairs by the Wilson administration, today's Washington dispatches announce. Dr. Coughlin, who had a long chat with his friend, Secretary of the Navy Josephus Daniels, is quoted as saying:

From the conversation I had with Mr. Daniels I am confident the entire Cabinet will do just as he is doing, proceed along conservative lines until they familiarize themselves with the work of their departments.

I look for the Wilson administration to be run along eleanent, business lines. In my opinion the President has made a good move in putting the settlement of patronage on the shoulders of his Cabinet members.

That Mr. Wilson is giving his Cabinet officers a great deal of authority, I appreciate fully, but if they do not bear their responsibilities as Mr. Wilson thinks they should, he can get other Cabinet officers.

Father Here from New York to Hunt Three Runaways

Francis B. Wynkoop of No. 647 Jefferson Place, New York, is in Boston hunting for his fourteen-year-old son Horace, who ran away with two other boys in the middle of February. They were last heard from in this city February 20. The Boston and State police are assisting.

Fred Ryder, the thirteen-year-old son of a neighbor of the Wynkoops, was another of the young adventurers who came to Boston. The third was a boy of about the same age named Vincent Egan.

This is the last word the Wynkoops had from their son in Boston:

Dear Mama—I am very sorry for what I did, but I will return as soon as I make up the money. I didn't think twice and am sorry. I am leaving tomorrow to a different part of the city, as I was promised a position. With much love and a heart full of joy to all.

Hoping you will forgive me, I am Your loving son,
HORACE.

YOUNG HEIR TO RUSSIAN THRONE NOW A CRIPPLE

ST. PETERSBURG, March 7.—The Romanoff dynasty today is celebrating its tercentenary amid hearty rejoicing throughout Russia, but the Romanoff heir, about whose mysterious illness so much has been rumored and so much denied, excited keen sympathy from the crowd as he was carried in and out of the Cathedral.

The youth, who is the idol of his mother and father, as well as of every loyal Russian, and whose birth caused profound rejoicing throughout the Russian empire, looked the picture of health as he drove with his father through the crowded streets to the Cathedral. But there he was lifted into the arms of a Cossack and carried into the edifice.

He stood during part of the service, where it is customary to stand, but did not kneel. This fact was taken to mean only one thing, that the boy cannot bend his knee, and thus is unable to walk.

QUIT CALOMEL!

Thousands Are Turning from This Dangerous Drug.

A Safe Vegetable Substitute Is Olive Tablets for the Liver.

Dr. F. M. Edwards, a prominent physician of Ohio, has discovered a new laxative and liver toner in a combination of vegetable materials, mixed with olive oil, which is, in effect, almost exactly like the old and untrustworthy calomel, except that there are none of the bad after effects of calomel.

Dr. Edwards has long been a foe of calomel, though he recognized its value along with its dangers.

His distrust of the uncertain drug eventually started him years ago towards experiments with the view of discovering a substitute, and he is today in possession of the long-sought-for combination, which is in the shape of a little sugar-coated, olive oil colored tablet.

The results of 17 years' experience and practice are embodied in these marvelous little tablets.

They are called Dr. Edwards' Olive Tablets. They oil the bowels, and their effect on the liver has been the means of relief to many of Dr. Edwards' regular patients as well as to thousands of others who have suffered and were afraid of calomel.

They are gentle in their action, yet always effective. They bring about that exuberance of spirit, that natural buoyancy which should be enjoyed by everyone, by toning up the liver and clearing the system of harmful impurities. 10c and 25c per box.

CHAMBER WILL PUT QUESTIONS TO MR. MELLEN

The directors of the Chamber of Commerce will meet next Thursday to frame a series of questions to be put to President Mellen of the New Haven railroad system.

The questions will be based upon criticisms of New Haven and Boston & Maine management, as brought out at the hearing before the Chamber of Commerce directors yesterday. Louis D. Brandeis, Charles H. Jones, Bernard J. Rothwell and others attended the meeting, by special invitation.

On the answers given by President Mellen to the series of questions will be based the final report which the chamber directors will make on the New England transportation problem, with recommendations thereto.

Mr. Rothwell charged that the New Haven is ruining the Boston & Maine service.

Louis D. Brandeis, speaking of the New Haven-Boston & Maine merger, said:

It is contrary to the federal anti-trust law, according to the rule laid down by the Supreme Court in the recent Southern Pacific and Union Pacific dissolution. It was contrary to the fundamental law of human nature, which imposes limitations on man's activities. Men need inventive, and monopoly lacks incentive. It has violated the inexorable law of arithmetic, for it has adopted a policy of simplifying its system to allow extravagant payments on capital account.

What the road needs in the interest of its stockholders and shippers at be is to jettison every bit of property which is not strictly railroad property and to separate from the Boston & Maine.

How this separation is to come about we cannot tell. But if it does not come voluntarily, then there is nothing left for you but State ownership.

JAMES WILSON GETS A LIFE-SIZED BUST

VASSAR REPORT IS NEWS TO DEAN KING

PROVIDENCE, March 7.—Dean King of Pembroke Hall, Brown University, said today she was not being considered as successor to President James M. Taylor of Vassar College, as was reported from Poughkeepsie.

HARRY K. THAW as he appears today, from snapshot taken while Thaw was on his way to court in New York yesterday.

NEW YORK, March 7.—A speedy end was put to Harry K. Thaw's fifth effort at liberation yesterday by the withdrawal of the writ of habeas corpus, which had again been invoked in his behalf. Dr. Charles Kennedy, Thaw's new counsel, said last night this move was prompted by fear that the scandal attached to the $25,000 fund for his client's release, which the Governor's Committee on Inquiry developed, would prejudice any attempt to have Thaw declared sane at this time. There had also been insufficient opportunity, said Dr. Kennedy, to confer with the defendant on the case.

"The writ will be renewed," said Dr. Kennedy, "some time later."

Thaw was brought down from the State Hospital for the Criminal Insane at Matteawan to attend the hearing, which was held in Justice Giegerich's court. With him at the bar were Dr. Kennedy, W. A. Stone, formerly Governor of Pennsylvania, general counsel for the Thaw family, and Henry Hirschberg, a Newburgh lawyer, who acted as spokesman for Thaw in withdrawing the writ. W. T. Jerome, formerly District Attorney, appeared for the State.

Thaw arrived in town filled with eager hopes, but these were shortly crushed by Mr. Stone, who counseled that this was not the time for action, in which view he was backed by Roger O'Mara, formerly Chief of Police of Pittsburgh, who represented Thaw's mother.

In granting the motion to withdraw the writ, Justice Giegerich intimated that if the writ had not been withdrawn he would have sent it to the Ninth Judicial District, in which Matteawan is located, for hearing.

The Grand Jury of New York County will take up early next week the investigation of the $25,000 fund. It is probable that Thaw will be asked to testify.

BILL TO REGULATE HAT PINS IN MAINE

AUGUSTA, Me., March 7.—The Legislative Committee on Public Health has reported favorably on the Spencer Bill to regulate the length of hatpins.

PARLIAMENT AT END; CONVENES AGAIN MONDAY

LONDON, March 7.—Parliament adjourned today after one of the longest sessions in many years. Except for brief recesses at Easter and Christmas and a six weeks' vacation in the Summer, the legislators have been in continuous session since February of last year, and have disposed of one of the heaviest programs ever presented by a cabinet.

The two big measures passed by the Commons, the home rule bill and the Welsh disestablishment bill, were both promptly and overwhelmingly rejected by the Lords, but the rejection was barrenness, for they will become laws under the veto act if passed by Commons at the next session, which convenes March 10, and again in 1914.

One of the most important legislative achievements was the passage through both houses of the white slave bill, providing for the flogging of procurers.

The only big measure the government was forced to drop was the franchise reform bill, and its withdrawal was caused by the introduction of suffragette amendments.

To get the appropriation bills under way by the usual time, the end of March, it is necessary for Parliament to reassemble for the new session next Monday, one of the shortest intervals on record.

Marie Corelli Charges Actor Stole Her Plot

LONDON, March 7.—Marie Corelli is plaintiff in an action in the Chancery Court today. The novelist is asking the court to grant an injunction restraining George Gray, the noted vaudeville performer, from producing a sketch entitled, "The People's King." She alleges the sketch is a dramatization of her book, "Temporal Power," and that incidents in it form the basis of Gray's sketch.

Gray denies the novelist's charges, and says his sketch was written before "Temporal Power" was published.

ACTORS MOURN MRS. BREEN OF MUSEUM DAYS

Mrs. William F. Breen, whom theatregoers of thirty years ago knew as Gertrude Calef, noted as an impersonator of children's roles in the Boston Museum Stock Company, is dead at her home, No. 110 Winthrop street, Roxbury. She was forty-three years old and had been ill a little more than two months. The funeral will be held tomorrow morning at St. Patrick's Church, Dudley street. Burial will be in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury. Many actors and actresses who knew her are planning to attend.

Mrs. Breen belonged to one of the most remarkable theatrical families ever identified with Boston. She was one of seven sisters, all of whom became popular on the stage, and three of them were concerted at one time or another with the Boston Museum.

They were daughters of Luke Murphy, one of the original members of Gilmore's famous brass band fifty years ago, and also, till his death in 1873 player of the French horn in the Boston Theatre Orchestra. He was first president of the earliest local organization of band musicians, the Musicians' Relief Fund Society.

"Victory" Bronze May Be Installed at State House

The news that the bronze figurehead of "Victory," which adorned the prow of the famous battleship Massachusetts, a gift of the State of Massachusetts to the United States upon the launching of the vessel, is to be returned to the Commonwealth, aroused interest on Beacon Hill today.

The figurehead is now at the Brooklyn Navy Yard, having been removed from the Massachusetts, and Former Secretary Meyer of the Navy informed the members of the Governor's Council that as long as the United States could not give back anything accepted as a gift Massachusetts might have the bow ornament for an indefinite time.

"Victory" will probably be assigned a place of honor in the State House.

BOSTON MEN DO WELL IN TITLE TRACK GAMES

By THOMAS J. HALPIN.

(Quarter-Mile Champion of United States and Canada.)

NEW YORK, March 7.—The indoor National A. A. U. championships, which was held in New York last evening, was one of the closest fought and exciting set of games yet held in this city.

The surprise of the meet was the defeat of Kelehmalnen in the two-mile run and the winning of the 600 and 1,000-yard runs by Kiviat. The Staten Islander showed that he was one of the greatest middle distance runners in the world.

He won the 1,000-yard race in world's record time and then came out and in the 600-yard run outsprinted Meredith and the writer in the final dash for the tape.

Kelehmainen, the great distance runner, wearing the colors of the Irish-American A. C. for the first time, dropped out of the two-mile race, which was won by Kramer. The surprise of this race was Hedlund, who finished second to Kramer.

The 600-yard race was a thriller. The star men entered in this event were Meredith, Kiviat, Bonsig and the writer, who drew the outside position. Meredith was third from the pole with Kiviat fifth. De Genchy got the best, which he held for two laps. In the last lap Meredith and Kiviat, fighting it out, neck and neck, tore down the stretch with the writer third, and they finished in this order.

The 300-yard run saw Burns, the Vulcan runner, in the final, after winning his trial and semi-final heat. He was an easy winner in the fast time of 33 1-5s. He would have broken the A. A. U. record if he had not broken and got set back three yards. He ran a fine race and won in easy fashion.

BOWLING CHATTER

After much dickering, the Bicknell & Fuller bowling team has finally decided to accept the challenge of the Schraft bowling team, according to a letter from Peter Rebello. Rebello says he is ready to come to terms immediately, and arrangements for the match can be made with him any noon time.

Rebello adds that he received so many challenges that he was sick and tired of it. He also intimated that he was not by any means a member of the "Down and Out Club," and would prove this in the coming match.

M'FARLAND FAVORITE OVER BRITTON

Chicago Rivals Both Ready for Big Battle Tonight

Packey McFarland and Jack Britton, who meet in ten-round bout in New York tonight.

BOUTS TONIGHT.

Johnny Dohan vs. Young McDonough, Kid Lee vs. Young Morgan, Young Cahle vs. Kid Hamilton and Kid George vs. Young Cooney, Lowell.

Jack Britton vs. Packey McFarland, New York.

"One-Round" Davis vs. Barney Williams, Buffalo.

GREAT CROWD WILL SEE "LIGHTWEIGHTS" FIGHT; MOST BETS MADE AT EVEN MONEY.

NEW YORK, March 7.—Packey McFarland, the Chicago stockyard boy, and Jack Britton, the principals in the much-heralded lightweight contest at the Madison Square Garden tonight, are primed and anxious for the opening bell to sound to start them off in their ten-round battle. From all indications, both battlers are anxious to get the other into the squared circle, and the local boxing followers are taking this as a criterion that it will be the greatest battle fought here for many moons.

The betting boys have been bolding out, for it is a tough battle to pick the winner. What bets have been registered were made at even 'money, with many takers on either end.

JOH TO REFEREE GREAT BATTLE.

Some even termed this battle a "grudge" bout. McFarland and Britton are the winning of championship honors. The greatest rivals in the ring today, and when they meet all kinds of fireworks are predicted. These boxers met two years ago and Britton had a slight advantage, but in the bout tonight Dan Morgan's bread-winner believes that his margin of victory will be very visible to everybody inside Madison Square Garden.

William Joh, the official referee of the Garden A. C., will act as the third man in the ring. Dan Morgan, manager of Jack Britton, objected to Joh early this week but left the matter in the hands of the Boxing Commission, which decided that Joh was a very capable official. McFarland was so anxious to see that bout go through that he said he would let Britton name any referee he desired.

Boxers to Weigh 137 Pounds.

The boxers will weigh in at 137 pounds at 3 o'clock, and both will be under the stipulated weight. Never before have the boxers prepared for a bout as in this case. Packey has been in hard training for the past month and will enter the ring at his very best.

McFarland is rated as the most scientific boxer the game has ever produced. McFarland is a bit too heavy to scale within the lightweight stipulations, and this is the only thing which prevents him from being the undisputed champion.

The Chicago boy has defeated the best boxers in the division with ease, but tonight he intends to try everything he has got and give his rival a hard beating.

McFarland has stated that he intends to retire within a year, and he wants to quit the ring with all colors flying high. Defeat at the hands of Britton would be severe setback, and McFarland is confident that this will not happen.

Both Britton and McFarland have their eyes open for a match with Willie Ritchie, the lightweight champion, and this glory cannot go to the loser. McFarland would make 135 pounds for Ritchie and believes that the title-holder will agree to this weight.

Boston Men Will See Bout.

Britton is a very much improved boxer since he met McFarland two years ago. Since then he has engaged in about twenty hard bouts with all types of boxers, and has won them all. He has improved in skill and speed, and in his training has worked hard on the Packey McFarland type of battle.

A big delegation of Chicago sporting men will be at the ringside and whoop things up for their idol. Boston, Philadelphia and Cleveland will also be represented by delegations of sporting men.

Horace Mann High and Winthrop Five to Clash Tonight

The basketball teams of Winthrop High and the Horace Mann High of Franklin will clash tonight at Winthrop, to decide the championship of eastern Massachusetts. Both teams will go into the game with a clean slate for the season, and each is predicting a victory.

The game is expected to be the best of many seasons. Winthrop has won twenty games this season by good margins, while in turn the Franklin boys have been victorious in eighteen contests. The winner of the game this evening will probably play Provincetown High for the championship of the State.

Amateur Games

The Maplewood Baseball Club is out with a challenge to the fastest semi-pro teams in the State. Manager Lindbom is anxious to get an early start, and therefore is ready to book engagements with any team. The team would like like to get the services of a good left-handed pitcher. Manager J. A. Lindbom, No. 4 Golden street, Maplewood.

Roslindale will be represented this coming season by the strongest team in the history of the organization. The players which will compose the nine have all had major or minor league experience. Manager Scampton is anxious to arrange a double-header for April 10, and also a game for April 23. The team will open May 10, and nearly all the games thereafter will be played in Roslindale. Manager H. G. Scampion, No. 26 South Walter street, Roslindale.

The fine weather has enabled the Parkway Athletic Club of Somerville to get in some good practice. The team is ready to start the season immediately. Address all communications to Manager Tom Flynn, No. 11 Springfield street, Cambridge.

The Dorchester Cubs are about to arrange a schedule for the coming season, and issue a sweeping challenge to all the fast amateur teams throughout Massachusetts. The team is composed of many former high school players, including Hayes, Parsons, Creeney, English High; Shaw and Maguire of the Carlisles, Daly, R. Stumpke and H. Stumpke of Commerce, Dever, Boston Latin; Porter, Danby and Bradley, Dorchester High, and Smullen and Costello, Mechanic Arts High. Any fast amateur desiring games may write to the manager, Peter P. Costello, No. 30 Tremont street, city.

The East Boston All Stars are again in the field and would like to arrange games with the strongest teams. The All Stars were not defeated last season. They beat such teams as the Bennetts of Somerville, Hamiltons of Lynn, St. Eulalies of South Boston, Taunton and Lexington. In Benson and Marley the All Stars have undoubtedly one of the best batteries in semi-pro ranks. The infield and outfield will remain unchanged. W. J. Pintt, who had much success two years ago, will manage the team, and wishes to hear from only the strongest teams. He can be reached by postal at No. 480 Sumner street, East Boston.

M'DONOUGH TO MEET DOHAN

"Young" McDonough, the Manchester, N. H., lightweight, is billed to meet Johnny Dohan of New York in a twelve-round bout at Lowell tonight. These two boys fought a slashing draw at the Ripsdie City Club several weeks ago and a big crowd of fight "fans" is expected to turn out to see them perform tonight.

McDonough and Dohan are both slashing fighters and there is sure to be but few idle moments when they clash this evening. Dohan has done a great deal of fighting in New York rings and he has usually managed to more than hold his own with his opponents.

McDonough does not need any introduction to New England fight "fans." He has appeared at all of the local clubs and he may always be relied upon to give a good account of himself.

BOTHNER EASILY BEATS MONTAGNA

George Bothner, the welterweight wrestling champion and holder of the Richard K. Fox belt, successfully defended his title in a finish catch-as-catch-can match, decided at the Grand Opera House last night, winning two straight falls from Nicholas Montagna.

St. John's Prep Team Issues Challenge to Arlington High

The St. John's Prep. hockey team of Danvers would like to arrange a game with either Arlington or Melrose High Schools to take place at some future date in the Arena.

This team has had a very successful season, winning all its games, and has as much right to the State championship as any other school as they have never been defeated or scored on this season. Among other teams, they defeated Boston English 3 to 0, which serves in claiming the championship of Boston by virtue of their victory over Boston Latin, which was also beaten in a runaway game by the prep. team 9 to 0.

The Danvers team has not been scored on this season. The team has as its instructor this season Dr. George Tingely of Boston, and has shown excellent team play, marked ability in shooting, and clever dodging, skating and carrying the puck, and feels confident of taking the measure of either Arlington or Melrose.

COMMERCE HIGH AND BOSTON COLLEGE IN DUAL TRACK MEET

The High School of Commerce track team will meet the Boston College High team on the new board track at the Fenway School this afternoon in what will in all probability be one of the closest track contests of the season.

Both schools have experienced little or no difficulty in disposing of their opponents this season, and with this as a criterion there is every indication that the school that does come out a winner will be but a few points ahead of the other.

The Fenway School is a slight favorite on account of the large number of seasoned men it will have in the different events.

MARSHALL TRIUMPHS IN CHESS TOURNEY

HAVANA, March 7.—P. J. Marshall of Brooklyn won first place in the Cuban chess tournament, which has been concluded here. J. R. Capablanca of Havana finished in second place. D. Janowski of Paris was third, while O. Chajes of Chicago and A. Kupchik of New York divided fourth and fifth prizes. The final score:

Players.	Won.	Lost.
Marshall	10½	4½
Capablanca	10	5
Janowski	9	6
Chajes	8½	7½
Kupchik	8½	7½
Hanon	6½	8½
Otero	3	11

KEMPTON IS STAR IN LYNN GAMES

The Malden High School track team, which is made up principally of Kempton undertook to defeat the Classical High School athletes in a dual indoor meet, but the feat was too much for Kempton and his team was defeated, 37½ to 30½ points. Kempton won two events of the many in which he competed and proved the only firsts made by Malden. His victories were in the 600 and 1,000-yard runs and he outclassed his competitors.

BENNETT LOST TO TEAM AT CORNELL

ITHACA, N. Y., March 7.—The Cornell track team suffered a severe loss when William H. Bennett sprained a tendon. He will not be able to run this year, it was said. Bennett was the best sprinter in the squad, a 220-yard man and member of the one-mile relay team.

WINTER PASTIME.

It's sweet to look at pictures
Of a snow storm in the North,
When the Southern sun is burning
With the heat of August fourth.

It is sweet to read of snow storms
When the sky down here is blue,
And the folks are always asking:
"Is it hot enough for you?"

Another glad pastime down here is to read about bowling tournaments a proximately 1,500 miles away. We have always contended that a bowling tournament is interesting at a distance of approximately 1,500 miles.

When you see a half column dissertation on the merits of a bush league pitcher it is a sign that news is scarce.

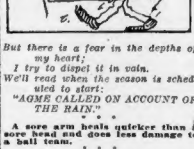
THE ONE BEST BET.

The sun may be shining, the sky may be clear,
The breeze may be balmy and warm;
The day may be dry as Sahara down here,
With never a sign of a storm.



But there is a fear in the depths of my heart;
I try to dispel it in vain.
We'll read when the season is scheduled to start:

CAMBRIDGE BOYS OUT TO DEFEAT SCHOOL TEAMS

Manager Wells of the Cambridge High and Latin School baseball team has completed his schedule for the season. The Cantabs expect to have a very strong nine. Many veterans are available for positions.

Dan O'Flaherty, the former Harvard athlete, has been engaged as coach, and he is out to develop a winner in the Triangular League. Candidates will be called out this afternoon, and a large squad is expected to report in the gymnasium. McCarthy, the first string pitcher of last season, will again be on the mound.

Donald Sands, Tom McNamara, Paul Siebert and Sandiford are all veterans and are out for infield positions. Captain Flynn will play his old position in the outfield. Following is the schedule:

April 8, Lowell Textile at Cambridge; April 9, Somerville High at Somerville; April 15, open; April 19, Boston Latin at Cambridge; April 19, Waltham High at Waltham; April 22, Boston English High at Cambridge; April 26, Pioneer at Pioneer, Cal.; April 29, open; May 2, open; May 6, Mass. School at Middleboro; May 10, Lynn High at Cambridge; May 13, Mass. Nautical at Cambridge; May 17, Somerville High at Cambridge; May 20, Mass. Nautical at Cambridge; May 24, Everett High at Everett; May 27, Boston Technical at Cambridge; June 3, Newton High at Newton (Triangular League); June 6, Brookline High at Cambridge (Triangular).

HARVARD FRESHIES SHOWING UP WELL

Practice in the Harvard baseball cage for the freshmen squad has progressed so fast in the last two weeks that already Coach Reeves had weeded out a few of the least promising of his fielding candidates. About forty men have been retained in the squad of fielders. The pitchers have already been cut down to four of each. In the list of men retained appears the names of Ed Mahan, captain of the freshmen football team last Fall; Watson,—quarterback on the class football team, and Ervin, goal tender on the 1916 hockey team.

NEW PITCHER FOR TEAM AT TUFTS

William A. Macks, '15, of Beverly, a pitcher, has joined the Tufts baseball squad, bringing the number of candidates to forty-five. He showed good form yesterday and is likely to make some of the other men hustle for a regular position.

WHY

Every union bricklayer, union shoemaker, union carpenter, union ironworker, and everybody connected with trade unions in general, should trade with Mitchell The Tailor at this particular season.

Because

Every dollar spent by me in manufacturing means 15c to 20c to support the striking tailors, as that is the revenue paid by my workmen to their union, and my prices today are 50 per cent. lower than any other tailor in the country.

It is to your benefit as a union man to get the order in now, when your striking brother will need the money, so that I can keep my shops going at top speed.

Pocket your skepticism. These goods are marked in plain figures in the window and can be found right inside the store, and if you can be practically your own salesman, and every customer buying a suit of this goods today saves from $10 to $15, and I don't care when the delivery is made.

I want to clean up all ends in my stock—Blue Serges, Worsteds, Tweeds and Cheviots. Some with enough for Two-Piece Suit and some with enough for Suit and extra Pants.

$1.00 extra for extra Pants.

1000 styles, all from high-priced tailors' stock, made under your eyes, subject to Union conditions. Order for Spring NOW.

SOUTHERN BASEBALL COACH "HOLDS UP" PILGRIMS' WORK

Showing the Pen Is Mightier Than a Steamship

By "Bud" Fisher

ROW OVER PILGRIMS PLAY SECOND GAME ON TODAY

By A. H. MITCHELL

ATHENS, Ga., March 7.—Another clash between the two teams of the Boston National squad, as selected by Manager Stallings, is billed for this afternoon, and it is hoped that they can go the full six innings as planned. The first encounter yesterday was chopped short when, after four and one-half innings had been played, Coach Cunningham of the University of Georgia team said to the Boston manager: "Come, Stallings, get your men off the field." "What for?" demanded Stallings. "I want to use it to coach my men, that's all," replied Cunningham.

Stallings bared his teeth. He has two rows of handsome white ivories and he has a habit of talking through them without opening his jaws.

"You know as much about coaching a ball team as a pig on roller skates," he observed. Under the circumstances, and considering the manner implied in the delivery of this biting remark, it bit a somewhat large chunk out of Mr. Cunningham's pompousness. However, that closed the incident.

BROKE UP MERRY GAME OF BALL.

Stallings took his teams off the field, but he promises to take the matter up before the faculty of the university, and it would not be surprising if Mr. Cunningham was put on the carpet by that solemn body of men. The understanding was that the Boston team should have the use of the field until 4 o'clock in the afternoons, yet Cunningham demanded it for his players at 3.30, while the big league boys were in the midst of a merry game of ball.

Stallings resurrects Athens, Ga., from oblivion every time he trains a ball team here, and the city has much to thank him for To show what it thinks of Stallings the city built him a ball park for training purposes a few years ago, but it was not used much, as it is in a locality exposed to the high winds that prevail here in the Spring.

Myers Says Whaling Is Wonder

Hap Myers, bringing six feet three inches of skin and bones, arrived in town and was ready for practice today. He is built like a pair of manicure scissors. He stole more bases than any other man in the Northwestern League last season. The reason is not far to seek. He simply takes six steps of fifteen feet each between first and second base and reaches his destination before the ball rests in the catcher's mitt.

Hap was a Red Sox recruit in Patsy Donovan's first year as manager. As a ball player he is an able citizen, in spite of his skyscraping build. He played in the same league last year with James Whaling, Strand and Gervais, who are Boston National recruits, and, therefore, he has a fine line on the abilities of these players.

Hap knows a ball player when he sees one, too. He says: "Whaling is a wonderful catcher. He caught more than 140 games last season and only had nine errors. He is the most perfect thrower to second bang I ever saw. He is full of pepper and is in the game from the minute it starts until the last man is out. He made James as a pitcher. He keeps the men on edge all the time. He is a wonder."

Whaling, by the way, has shown up, too. He is a big fellow, making with James one of the biggest sized batteries playing ball. He is six-footer and weighs now more than 200 pounds, but says he will train down to about 185. He has broad shoulders and looks like a ball player from the feet up. He was ready for work today. Bill James, his side partner, was overjoyed to see the big catcher.

Strand and Gervais Look Good.

Regarding Paul Strand, the left-handed pitcher secured from the Spokane club, Hap Myers says: "I think Strand is a better man than James. He is only a kid, but you ought to see him pitch when he is right. He has a lot of speed and uses good judgment in pitching. On the whole, Hap thinks the Boston Nationals got the cream of the Coast players. He says he wrote McAleer to be sure and not let Paul Strand get away from the Red Sox, but it seems the option had expired and the Nationals had secured Strand.

It is a very peaceful crowd of ball players that is gathered here under the managerial wing of George Stallings. There are no village rubups and no practical jokers have developed. There are no "queen cusses" either. It is a particularly well behaved lot. There is nothing to do in this town but play ball, eat and go to bed To be sure, there are "movies," but even "movies" grow tiresome. No penny ante games have developed either. The boys must be woefully short of cash. Also they are comparative strangers to each other and maybe they dislike to ask for credit.

SIDELIGHTS ON SPORTS

By A. H. C. MITCHELL

THE least heralded of all the "holdouts," but one of the most important of them all, was missing when the Red Sox assembled to start for Hot Springs this morning. The absent brother was Ray Collins, and his failure to show up under contract received the question that psychologists ought to answer: "Why are left-handers eccentric?"

* * *

COLLINS is certainly not a "dog," like most of the other port-siders. Neither is Marquard—in the general acceptance of the term. Yet, Marquard is the only "hold-out" of the team that fought the Sox almost to a standstill in last Fall's world's series, and, like Collins, he is the only important left-bander in his squad. And neither "hold-out" can back up his "holding out" with a good, square reason for failing to accept the terms offered to him by his team.

* * *

COLLINS has no bad habits that anybody ever noticed. But the opinion at Red Sox headquarters is that he is not a dyed-in-the-wool baseball star; consequently his failure to stay has not caused the connecting that ought naturally to follow the threatened withdrawal from baseball of the greatest left-handed pitcher of control in the national game. McAleer offered him a price; Collins refused it and neither has budged since.

"If I thought Collins was worth more to us, I would give it to him," said the Sox president. "But I cannot figure him worth more than I offered, as his showing last year, when he was not in form to pitch winning games until the season was half over."

* * *

COLLINS appeared in twenty-seven games last season—less than all of the other Sox regular pitchers. The champions were practically without a left-handed flinger until July, when Collins rounded to. He still from Connecticut, to find was all in dropped from the team when the Spink wrecking out occurred. But after Stahl had waited patiently he was rewarded by some remarkable left-handed pitching. Collins won fourteen and lost eight games, for a percentage of .636.

* * *

THEY feel at Sox headquarters that because of last year's showing Collins needed early work this year in order to get into condition to pitch his share of the game in the early part of the season. He reported big and heavy and apparently needs a lot of training to get down to his best form. They argue that a pitcher was in good for only the latter half of the season is not dependable enough to call for a high salary. No matter how successful he is when once started. They argue, too, that Collins' record in the games he did pitch last year —.636—was so far below the Red Sox final record of .601 that it hardly justified a salary increase based upon the work he can do when right.

* * *

IT is believed that Coll ns received about $3,500 last season, and that he was offered little, if any, increase this year His old colleague, Larry Gardner, however, was given a three years' contract at $5,000 a year, and several other stars were awarded substantial increases. On Collins' side it is maintained that he ought to share in the general increase of Sox salaries, that he is a superb pitcher when in form, that he is always dependable, and that, moreover, there is an increasing shortage in left-handed pitchers everywhere, and Collins is the only reliable one on Stahl's staff.

* * *

COLLINS has led Sox followers to believe that if he doesn't receive what he demands he will retire for a season, as he believes he can make money in farming or business in and about Burlington, Vt. It looks, though, to a man up a tree as if Collins' withdrawal for one season would mean his retirement from the game. Men like Collins are likely to take one too many weight and become too slow to return to the game after a year's lay-off. If he came to hand early, and stood the gruff all season, Collins ought to command a high salary. Stahl has but two left-handed "rookies" at Hot Springs—Leonard and Watkins.

RED SOX REAR GUARD OFF M'ALEER LEADS THE WAY

By L. R. MURDOCH.

A BUNCH of Red Sox made their getaway this morning for Hot Springs, being the nucleus of the main squad of the Red Sox headed for training camp, where they will try to whip themselves into shape for another world's championship and a small fortune of gate money.

Although Jake Stahl has had thirteen pitchers and catchers at the Springs for a week, the squad that started today was considered the principal part of the team. Scattered Red Sox will be picked up en route and those who are not members of this main party will assemble individually at the Arkansas resort on Sunday.

The Boston party left the South Station at 10:03 a. m. They were due to arrive in New York at 4 and to take a special Pullman car on the Baltimore & Ohio at 6.30 for Washington. At the Capital they will go westward to Cincinnati, where they are due tomorrow evening, to Hot Springs, arriving at 8.35 p. m. Sunday, when there will be a great to-and-up of the champions of the world and thence through Memphis, Tenn., to Hot Springs, arriving at 8.35 p. m. Sunday, when there will be a great to-and-up of the champions of the world

FIVE RED SOX LEAVE BOSTON.

The squad that left Boston this morning had but five Red Sox: President James R. McAleer; Larry Gardner, the fleet third baseman; Harold Janvrin, the former English High School lad who, after a year of seasoning with the Jersey City (International League) team, hopes to cut into big league company this season. Charley Farrell, the "Duke of Marlboro." He will be battery instructor for the champions, and Edward R. Riley, the keeper of the coin for the Sox. Three baseball "fans"—Joe Burns, Jack Donnelly and Mike McDonough—joined the bunch, together with three newspaper writers.

Two Sox Are Lost.

Captain "Heinie" Wagner, Albin Carlstrom, a "rookie sub" for "Heinie," and Bill Sheridan, official telegrapher for the party, were to jump aboard at New York. Steve Yerkes was due to hop on at Philadelphia. This completes the eastern squad.

This Speaker was scheduled to leave Hubbard City, Tex., today, and Harry Hooper and "Duffy" Lewis were due to leave the coast. Clyde Engle and Olaf Henriksen, the "twins" who made heroes of themselves in the world's series, are due at Hot Springs, but have been missing for several days.

They elected to go to New Orleans by sea, and thence by a Mississippi River steamboat to Memphis, starting more than two weeks ago. After they had left Boston a railroad passenger agent informed Sox headquarters that if they tried to climb the Mississippi by steamboat it would be a guess when they reached camp—if ever. Since then McAleer and his office force have watched the news dispatches and the telegraph offices in vain for news of the wanderers. The voyage of Eagle and Henriksen is the first baseball mystery of 1913, threatening to take rank with the bulk of "Buck" O'Brien.

Jake Stahl expects to gather all of his men at the Hotel Eastman, Hot Springs, Sunday night, when he will have his first heart-to-heart talk with the bunch. Stahl is not much of a speechmaker and, whether or not he believes in lecture-room baseball, he does not practice much of it. So whatever he has to say to the Sox Sunday may be expected to be brief.

The leader of the new world "champs" expects to have nearly all of his men out for work Monday morning. They will have one week of practice before lining up against the Pirates from Pittsburgh for the first game of the inter-league series a week from Monday.

Collins and Walsh are Left Behind

The only two Sox left behind today were George E. Walsh, the "rookie" outfielder from Fall River, whose father is seriously ill, and Ray Collins, the only veteran left-handed pitcher on the team, who has declined McAleer's terms for 1913 and will quit baseball altogether unless he or his boss yields.

Since Collins knew that McAleer would leave with the team today it was expected that if the long southpaw was ever to waver it would be this morning before he could have to do business, if he decided to accept the Sox terms. McAleer did not waver in the least before starting West. His last words on the Collins question were:

"I offered Collins all that I considered he was worth to us. I would be glad to have him with us at those figures, but I would not change them. We can get along without Collins if he decides not to accept our proposition."

The Red Sox will be seen in Boston again about one month from today, when they will "blow in" town after a three days' series at Cincinnati, the only baseball they will play on the way home unless Jake Stahl finally arranges a date with the University of Illinois at Champaign, Ill.

On April 8 they will play Holy Cross at Fenway Park, and the following day will tackle the Harvard team. The—and April 10—they will open the American League season in Boston, their antagonists being Connie Mack's ex-world champion Athletics at opponents for the Red Sox curtain-raiser

MARTIN REFUSES TO ENTER RING

GLOUCESTER, March 7.—Terry Martin of Lawrence refused to go on against George Robinson of Cambridge in the feature bout at the Cape Ann Athletic Club. Three bouts were held. Young Connelly of Manchester lost to Bowker Lowrey of Salem in four rounds. Eddie Cassidy of Everett was knocked out Kid Currier of Sacramento in two rounds and "Crispy" McLeod and Kid Huge boxed four rounds to a draw.

DUTCH LEONARD FINALLY GAINS RED SOX SQUAD

HOT SPRINGS, Ark., March 7.—Dutch Leonard, the crack young southpaw of the Boston Red Sox, who was a member of Jake Stahl's training party in the Spa last Spring, but who was shipped to Denver early in the Summer, where he practically pitched Jack Hendricks' grizzlies to the Western League championship, is the athlete of the hour in the world's champions' training party.

Leonard finally arrived yesterday after noon, in company with Grover Brant, another one of Manager Stahl's rookies, after being on the road six days to the ride from Fresno, Cal., to this fair city. He was overweight. Such a thing as a member of the renowned Boston outfit not being practically down to weight at this early turn in the road is the phenomenon of all phenomenons.

Joe Wood, Charley Hall, Buck O'Brien, Bill Carrigan, Forest Cady, Leslie Nunnamaker, "Tom" Thomas and the five young hurlers, Messrs. Ainsworth Mosely, Watkins, Foster and Martina, all looked ready for the word "go" when they reached Hot Springs. Brant, who came East with Leonard, is also scaling at the right figure.

But Leonard has flesh to take off This crack young southpaw looks fat and adults that he is from twelve to fifteen pounds above his rightful hurling notch, so at last Trainer Joe Quirk has something else to do but buy diamonds and fountain pens and turn down offers to coach universities.

DR. HUTCHINSON FINDS FRIEDMANN CURE TEST IS "DISAPPOINTING"

Dr. Woods Hutchinson, the noted lecturer and writer on popular phases of medicine, has written especially for the AMERICAN a description of his visit to Dr. Friedmann and a study of his tuberculosis serum. Dr. Hutchinson says:

By DR. WOODS HUTCHINSON.

Early yesterday morning I received an intimation, through the courtesy of a colleague connected with the hospital, that a test of the Friedmann cure would be made at the People's Hospital in lower Second avenue, and that a limited number of physicians invited by the staff of the hospital would be permitted to be present.

My first feeling was one of relief and satisfaction that at last the red tape was to be cut, the bylaws suspended and our visitor, after his stormtossed and astonishing experiences with the management of the Waldorf Astoria, the board of health the owners of office buildings and the county medical society, was to be given an opportunity to show exactly what was in his much-heralded cure and to demonstrate its powers by actual experiment.

Obstacles Unavoidable.

Of course it is only fair to remember that all of these "providences" were more or less compelled to take the attitude they did by forces beyond their control, or by the law of the land. Especially was this the case with the board of health, in view of the fact that Dr. Friedmann's remedy is no mere drug or chemical, or "finished" sanitorium, the full effect of which for good or evil can be seen in a few hours or days at the outside; but contains living germs which must grow and multiply in the body for at least two or three months in order to produce any curative effect, and so telling what virulent changes they may undergo in that time.

It is useless even to test the serum upon animals. First, because all the experimental guinea pigs immunized by the cure in Berlin ultimately died of tuberculosis, and second, because Dr. Friedmann frankly declared to the surgeon of our marine hospital service, when refusing to give them a sample for examination, that it was entirely without effect upon animals and would only work upon human beings.

Still it was coming to be felt that it would be little short of a calamity if any remedy seriously alleged to be a cure for such a fearful foe of mankind as tuberculosis should be prevented by any combination of circumstances or legal restriction from giving a full, fair and open trial on its merits.

Such an opportunity was afforded to Dr Friedmann yesterday morning. And a brief, straightforward and impartial narrative of the way in which he embraced the opportunity will perhaps enable the public to judge how he rose to it and how far he fulfilled the high expectations aroused by his coming.

Obviously no final conclusion or judgment of any kind can be pronounced, as this was only the first step in a test which it will take weeks and probably months to complete, in the form of definite results, either positive or negative.

Only Few Waiting.

In marked contrast to the crowds which had besieged the Waldorf when Dr. Friedmann first reached the hospital about 11 o'clock there were only three or four patients waiting.

The cases accepted by Dr. Friedmann for treatment were two men of about thirty-five or forty years of age, with pulmonary tuberculosis, and a young woman with bone tuberculosis of the knee-joint. One of the male patients had had the disease for five years and lost six pounds in weight. The other had had it for four years and lost five pounds. Both had good color and appetite, no noticeable cough, and, in fact, were typical cases of the long-lived, chronic so-called chronic type of the disease which runs anywhere from five to fifteen years, and then sometimes heals up or comes to a standstill.

As both of them, under reasonable care, might be expected to live at least three to five years, and make several temporary gains in the meantime (in fact, one had gained five pounds under the open air treatment only a few months before), it is frankly a little difficult to conceive exactly what definite and positive result Dr. Friedmann could expect to obtain for better or worse from even the most active and powerful remedies in these cases. Certainly, nothing could be positively set down as due to the remedy far short of three or four months. For a perpetual series of oscillations, up-and-down relapses, followed by improvements, followed by further relapses, is their regular outline history and experience.

Of course, no reasonable man would have expected Dr. Friedmann to cure any large per cent of the far-gone or rapidly advancing early cases. Yet, in view of the high claims made for his remedy and the difficulty he has had in getting an adequate field for trial, it is certainly a matter for regret that he was disinclined to take—in the vernacular—"sporting chances," and give the world an opportunity to see just what might possibly be accomplished by it in as many different types and stages of the disease as possible. Especially, in view of the fact that his assistant in Berlin, H. Florkowski, is now claiming cures by it in 100 per cent. of early cases, 60 per cent. of middle-stage and 40 per cent. of advanced cases.

Refuse Girl's Last Hope.

Poor Clara Strassburger might at least have been given a 40 per cent. chance for her life, instead of being led away, weeping and heart-broken, her last hope taken from her.

The third or bone case in the girl, was again rather a disappointment to most present. Her right knee was at first swollen and the joint evidently bound down by adhesions. But it was neither red nor painful to pressure. She had no fever, she was plump to the verge of fatness, and even her color was good, her eyes bright, and she was evidently in the resting stage of the disease.

MUST WAIT FOR CURE TO SHOW ITS EFFECTS, SAYS DR. FRIEDMANN

NEW YORK, March 7.—Dr. Friederich Franz Friedmann saw a reporter for the AMERICAN at his apartments in the Hotel Ansonia. Dr. Freidmann announced through Mr Hunat that he had not read the reports of his giving treatment at the People's Hospital yesterday. He said:

Tuberculosis is a long, lingering, chronic disease. It is just as evident that the process of healing is to be slow as that process of destruction is a gradual one.

Some of the doctors seem to think that all that is necessary is one injection of my serum, and immediately the patient will show how he has been cured. Literally nonsense; were the first three cases I have treated in the New World and the results here will be the same that they have been in the Old World.

Dr. Friedmann's temperamental nature was revealed when he was asked about the story that Dr. Julius Broder of No 103 East Sixteenth street, had come to him with a patient whom he refused to treat.

Friedmann said: "One doctor—I do not know his name—came to my brother with a girl whom he wished me to treat. I looked at her and decided that I would wait eight days before treating her. 'In eight days,' said this doctor, 'she may be dead.' To this I replied that my serum was a cure for tuberculosis and not for death."

Loses $40 Worth of Oil Saving 30 Cents on Cartage

Antonio Lurce, who keeps a store in the North End, believes fully the old proverb, "Whenever oil is spilled, ill-luck strikes him who spills it."

Bumping along the cobblestones on North street, Antonio rolled a barrel containing thirty gallons of olive oil, for which he had just paid $60. He was saving thirty cents cartage, he explained. Then the staves burst.

Olive oil poured over the cobbles of the square, and in a few seconds had frozen, making a miniature skating rink for delighted children. Then, true to the proverb, Antonio slipped himself and hurt his side.

Plan Washington Chapel to Rival Paris Notre Dame

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Plans for a nation-wide collection among the Catholic churches have been laid for the purpose of raising funds to erect a $500,000 chapel on the campus of the Catholic University.

A local committee of Catholic women, headed by Mrs. Robert Hinckley of this city, and Mrs. Buerel Hoffman of New York, have inaugurated the campaign.

Steps already have been taken in many other cities of the country to organize similar societies in the Catholic church, and funds are expected to be forthcoming within a few weeks. Among the cities in which these organizations have been formed are New York, Philadelphia, Buffalo, Baltimore, St. Paul, St. Louis, Cincinnati and Boston.

Mgr. Thomas J. Shanan, rector of the university announces that the chapel will rival in architectural beauty the Church of Notre Dame in Paris.

Sees Salvation Army as Church of the Rich Man

Professor Thomas Nixon Carver of Harvard, president of the Country Church Association, declared at the closing session of the rural conference in Channing Hall that the Salvation Army is going to become the rich man's church. He said:

I prophesy that within three generations the Salvation Army will become the rich man's church; not because it gets its rich men ready-made, but because it is making rich men out of poor men.

HUNT MANCHESTER BANDIT WHO FLED AT GIRLS' CRIES

MANCHESTER, N. H., March 7.—The police are hunting for a masked bandit who held up Emma Lewis and Ada Desmarais at the point of a revolver, but who died when the girls' screams attracted attention. He ran, muttering, "I'll get you yet."

It is believed the thief lay in wait for the girls, knowing that they were coming from their work. He first demanded their money, but when the frightened girls refused to give up he pointed the revolver at them.

3,000 TEACHERS SAY THEY CAN ALL BAKE BREAD

Boston public school teachers are not only breadwinners, but they are bread-makers, too. Three thousand of them stood up in Tremont Temple and declared that every "school marm" among them can bake good bread.

The teachers made known their bread-making abilities at the Tremont Temple meeting to hear several Western school officials speak. L. B. Anderson, head of the schools of Oregon, put the question about bread making, and all the Boston teachers said: "Yes, they could."

Dr J S Francis, superintendent of the schools of Los Angeles, Cal., told of an unusual incident in one of that city's schools for "bad" boys. He said:

"I was in a class one day when two boys got tired of working at their desks, and so they got up, went into a corner and had a boxing match. The work went on, and the teacher paid no attention to them. When the match was over they went back to their work."

Dr. Francis said Boston's educational system is the greatest in the world.

Chairman George E Brock of the school committee said:

We believe that we were elected to the School Board of Boston to govern them firmly, even though we feel that it is incumbent upon us to deal with all our employes as generously and as humanely as we can.

BEWARE, POLITE MAN!
GALLANTRY'S REWARD
JAIL CELL, SAYS JAP

"The honorable politeness," says Heijiro Teshima "gets a lallolity to deep trouble"

Boston gallants are warned, by what Teshima saw and says, not to be over-hasty in their courtesy to women.

He is Teshima is Procurator General of the High Court and Chief of the Bureau of Jurisprudence of Formosa (where some of the tea comes from). He has several other cities, when he came to see them.

In New York, according to a dispatch from Manhattan, he firmly made up his mind, from an incident he saw, that it does not pay to be polite-to-a-hurry. His own reason he gives as follows:

"I saw a woman in considerable distress because she couldn't push open the revolving door of a Broadway cafe. I was on the point of helping her, but another man got there first and, politely lifting his hat, said, 'Good evening,' and opened it for her. Then the man was arrested for having spoken to a strange woman on the street. I am glad that I am not going to be in New York any longer. I should be arrested, too."

EPISCOPALIANS ASK MORE PAY FOR THE CLERGY

Episcopal laymen at the next annual convention of that church in Massachusetts, April 9, in Jacob Sleeper Hall, will plead for larger salaries for the ministers.

Unmarried men have been receiving heretofore $1,000 and married men $1,200 with rectories. Fourteen hundred dollars is the new salary for unmarried ministers and $1,600 for the married ones. This is no longer an adequate salary, it is declared.

William H Bent of Taunton heads a committee investigating the matter of ministers' salaries and will make the following statement to the convention:

Your committee is unanimous in the opinion that a large number of our clergy are too meagerly salaried which are adequate to their proper support, and that a continued vigorous effort should be made to arouse those parishes to a realization of their duty in that regard.

A large majority of the laymen in our parishes, taken as a whole, are not professions men, and they do not take into account the fact that while they, on leaving school at sixteen or eighteen years of age, began to earn money for their support (at least in part), the young man who intended to enter the ministry was obliged to continue the work of his education for a period of four to seven years, at a large expenditure of money and time, with little opportunity to earn anything for his support.

Our clergy, as a whole, are not in the ministry for the money they can make, but did they seek that calling simply as a means of support. They are self-sacrificing and have pledged their lives to a holy service. They are justly entitled to generous support, we must take into account that a clergyman must maintain himself and family in a manner appropriate to his position in the community.

JACKSON COLLEGE GIRLS BAR TUFTS MEN FROM FAIR

At Jackson College tonight the most unusual social event of the year will take place—a street fair. The fair will be a miniature reproduction of Revere Beach with its roly-poly, Coney Island with its roasted peanuts, the county fair with its fakers and the circus with its side-shows.

There will be on exhibition the "One Woman Band," the official suffragette, the "Silent Woman," and a demonstration by the inventor of a "new and unique" system of communication.

But gloom was in full possession of every Tufts man for the edict was issued that no men will be allowed to attend.

Crepes of All Kinds and Old-Time Weaves the Real Thing in the Spring Dresses

A waterproof hat made of mallines.

One of the very latest styles in street wear. In dull blue mohair.

Evening gown of gooseberry colored watered silk over lace.

The bodice of shadow lace, skirt of satin showing all the new points of fashion—the separate train, tight-fitting skirt with hip drapery and high Medici collar.

The Caprice umbrella, with pagoda effect of flowered taffeta.

By OLIVETTE

PITY the feelings of one Mr. Frits Jude, manager of one of Paris's largest dressmaking firms, who came over here to introduce the new "Tour de Lac," which is a skirt and not a lake promenade, and then found that it had gotten here before him.

The painful truth is that our Paris friends have to get up very early to get the fashion worm if they want to beat America at it.

The new skirt, which is to be popularized this Spring, is much fuller around the hips and sometimes it bags at the knees, but no woman need feel that she is to regain the privilege of the use of her limbs. No, indeed! The skirts are just as tight as they can be around the ankles, and they do make it less of a problem to get down and rise again without undue motion.

Among the materials used will be crepes of all kinds from the six-cent cotton crepe, to the exquisite silk materials that are crepe in effect and exceedingly high in price. Sicilliennes and mohair have come back into fashion with a bang and will be welcomed by the sensible women as well as the men, who are to use mohair for Summer suitings. Ratine and cotton crepes never have been so great as it is this year, and it would take a very fussy person indeed not to find something that pleased her and that expressed her individuality in some way.

Ladies, beautiful and vivid in color and design. Cretonnes, especially Chinese cretonnes, are used for trimmings and sometimes for entire gowns. The choice of material never has been so great as it is this year, and it would take a very fussy person indeed not to find something that pleased her and that expressed her individuality in some way.

Blouses are still loose with long shoulder seams and for afternoon and street dresses the sleeves are long, too. For evening wear the short sleeve forms part of the drapery of the bodice.

Skirts are, generally speaking, much fuller around the hips, with pleats or side drapery tucked into a belt, which is of varying height, either normal or a trifle higher.

The fulness of the skirt is manipulated in many clever ways, and shows the skill of the maker. Mostly it is twisted around the limbs and caught in at the knees, as shown in the illustration of the black satin gown with the lace bodice. Here one can see the separate train effect, which is a kind of lengthened tunic. The same picture shows the Medici collar, which is very much in evidence.

The Russian tunic in its modified form is the main idea of the smart little suit of dull blue mohair with its long and pleated basque and narrow skirt. Long, loose sleeves are a feature of this suit, and the very small toque of black straw with green plume is also typical of the Spring of 1913.

While some dressmakers are trying to introduce the tight bodice, it will be some time before we finish completely with the fruity fashion shown in the evening gown of gooseberry shade. The material is very light quality of crepe silk, draped in an original and effective way.

Among the Paris novelties are the new shapes in muslins. Some are Gainsborough like pagodas, some like high turrets, and the one illustrated shows a distinct "cachepot" on the part of Dame Fashion. It is of figured taffeta on a creamy ground.

PART II.—(Continued)

A KNOCK at the door brought her back to realities again. Her heart throbbed wildly. Had he come back to her already? Or had her enemy found her out at last?

Tryon Dunham hurried up the steps of the Y. W. C. A. Building, nearly knocking over a baggy individual in rubbers who was lurking in the entrance.

The young man had seen a boy in uniform, laden with two enormous boxes, at the steps as he turned the last corner. Hastily writing a few lines on one of his cards and slipping it into the largest box, he had hood on to the girl's door.

Then he stationed himself at the door of the carriage and came. It was there, he fancied inside to see if his orders about flowers had been fulfilled and spoke a few words of direction to the driver.

Turning back to the door, he found a small, red eyes of the baggy Irishman fixed upon him. Something in the slouch of his figure reminded Dunham strongly now of the man he had noticed the night before, and as he went back into the building he looked the man over well and determined to watch him. As he sat in the office waiting, twice he saw the bleary eyes of the baggy man applied to the glass panes in the front door and as suddenly withdrawn. It irritated him, and finally he strode to the door and asked the man if he were looking for any one.

"Just wanin' for me sweet-heart," whined the man, with a cringing attitude. "She has a room in here, an' I saw her go in a while back."

"Well, you'd better move on. They don't care to have people hanging around here."

The man slunk away with a vindictive glance, and Tryon Dunham went back to the office more perturbed at the little incident than he could understand.

Upstairs the girl had dared to open her door and had been relieved to find the elevator boy there with the two boxes.

"The gentleman's below, an' he says he'll wait, an' he sent these up," said the boy, depositing his burden and hurrying away.

She locked the door once more, for somehow a great fear had stolen over her now that she was again dressed in her own garments and could easily be recognized.

She opened the large box and read the card lying on the top:

"These are my wedding gifts to you, dear. Put them on and come as soon as possible to the one who loves you better than anything else in life.

TRYON"

Her eyes shone brightly and her cheeks grew rosy red as she lifted out from its tissue paper wrappings a long rich coat of Alaska seal, with exquisite brocade lining. She put it on and stood a moment looking at herself in the glass.

She felt like one who had for a long time lost her identity and has suddenly had it restored. Such garments had been ordinary comforts of her former life. She had not been warm enough in the coarse black coat.

The other box contained a beautiful hat of fur to match the coat. It was simply trimmed with one long, beautiful black plume and in shape and general appearance was like the hat he had borrowed for her use in the Fall. She smiled happily as she set it upon her head, and then laughed outright as she remembered her shabby silk gloves. Never mind. She could toss them off when she reached the church.

She packed the little black dress into the suit case, folded the felt hat on the top with a tender pat, and, putting on her gloves, hurried down to the one who waited for her.

The matron had gone upstairs to the linen closet and left the girl with the discontented upper lip in charge at the office. The latter watched the elegant limousine with the rich furs come down the hall from the elevator, and wondered who she was and why she had been upstairs. Probably to visit some poor protege, she thought.

The girl caught the loveliness in the eyes of Tryon Dunham as he rose to greet his bride, and she recognized him as the same man who had been in close converse with the cheaply dressed girl in the parlor an hour before, and somehow she wondered what the fine lady in furs would think if she knew about the other girl.

Then they went out to the carriage, past the baggy, rubbered man, who drank back suddenly behind a stone column and watched them.

As Dunham shut the door, he looked back just in time to see a silent man, with dark eyes and hair, burst up and touch the baggy man on the shoulder. The latter pointed toward their carriage.

"See!" said Dunham. "I believe those are the men who were hovering around the house last night."

The girl leaned forward to look, and then drew back with an exclamation of horror as the carriage started.

"Oh, that man is my cousin Richard," she cried.

"Are you sure?" he asked, and a look of determination settled into his face.

"Perfectly," she answered, looking again. "Do you suppose he has seen us?"

"I suppose he has but we'll soon turn the tables." He leaned out and spoke a word to the driver, who drew up around the next corner in front of a telephone pay station.

"Come with me for just a minute, dear. I'll telephone to a detective bureau where they know me and have that man watched. It is unsafe to have at large." He helped her out and drew her confidingly within his own. "Don't be afraid any more. I will take care of you."

He telephoned a careful description of the two men and their whereabouts, and before he had hung up the receiver a maid had started post-haste for the Y. W. C. A. Building.

Then Tryon Dunham put the girl tenderly into the carriage, and to divert her attention he opened the box of flowers and put a great sheaf of white roses and lilies-of-the-valley into the little gloved hands.

Then, taking her in his arms for the first time, he kissed her. He noticed the shabby gloves, and putting his hand in his breast pocket, drew out the white gloves she had worn before, saying: "See! I have carried them there ever since you sent them back! My sister never asked for them. I kept them for your sake."

Comparative Digestibility of Food

Made with different Baking Powders

From a Series of Elaborate Chemical Tests:

An equal quantity of bread (biscuit) was made with each of three different kinds of baking powder—cream of tartar, phosphate, and alum—and submitted separately to the action of the digestive fluid, each for the same length of time.

100 Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with phosphate powder:

68¾ Per Cent. Digested

Bread made with alum powder:

67¾ Per Cent. Digested

These tests, which are absolutely reliable and unprejudiced, make plain a fact of great importance to everyone: Food raised with Royal, a cream of tartar Baking Powder, is shown to be entirely digestible, while the alum and phosphate powders are found to largely retard the digestion of the food made from them.

Undigested food is not only wasted food, but it is the source of very many bodily ailments.

Hunting a Husband

By VIRGINIA TERHUNE VAN DE WATER

Beatrice Goes to a Dinner and Sends a Message of Belief in Him to Paul Maynard.

As Beatrice Minor and Dr. Haynes came up on her veranda Helen Robbins welcomed them with enthusiasm.

"It is dear of you people to come tonight!" she declared. "Goodness knows I want some cheerful persons here! John has come home from the city tired; Keith has the blues—or something that makes him almost cross—and the only other man I have succeeded in securing to dine here is Dr. Yeager."

"Yeager?" asked Dr. Haynes. "Is he the chap that you sent for to see Mrs. Minor this morning?"

"Yes," said her hostess, as she helped Beatrice remove her wraps. "He is a Chicagoan and a very nice chap. He is here on a short visit to Paul Maynard at the Cedar Cliff. They have been friends for years, and I have often heard Paul speak of him. So, when I found that you two could come, I telephoned for them to come over also. But Paul said he couldn't accept my invitation. Perhaps he is tired after last night's dance. For even he bore of your presence, Beatrice, failed to shake his determination."

"Good!" muttered Dr. Haynes in a voice that was meant to reach Beatrice only, but which her sharp-witted friend heard.

"What did you say?" she demanded suddenly. "Don't you like Paul?"

Maynard's Friend

"Does any man like the chap whom all the ladies love?" laughed Dr. Haynes. "Naturally, I am glad that such an attractive man will not be on hand when I want to talk to you and Mrs. Minor myself."

Helen Robbins shrugged her shoulders. "Oh, all right," she said. "But he is not selfish, like you, for he accepted joyfully for his friend, Dr. Yeager. By the way, Beatrice, he said that he had no doubt that his whom would fall a victim to your charms, or something of that sort. You know how much ridiculous stuff he can talk."

Keith Lacy had entered as his sister was talking and now greeted the two guests.

"Good evening, Mrs. Minor," he said simply. "I am happy to learn from Helen that you are feeling better than you were this morning." Before Beatrice could answer he had passed on to Dr. Haynes, and shaken hands with him. "I'm glad to see you, too," he remarked genially. "Helen, did I hear you remark that you were expecting other guests?"

"Only one other," she replied, "and that is Dr. Yeager. Paul Maynard's friend. Paul himself cannot come."

Beatrice, watching the young man, saw a look of relief cross his face and wondered what he would have done if Maynard had come. Her speculations were checked by the arrival of Dr. Yeager, who, after speaking to his hostess, turned to the widow with a smile that showed a set of perfect teeth. He was distinctly good-looking, Beatrice decided, in spite of the fact that she did not usually admire fair-haired, blue-eyed men. His complexion was fair, almost florid, and his coloring was, she thought, almost wasted on a man, but would have made a woman beautiful. If there was nothing effeminate about this tall, slender fellow, and his handclasp was cool and firm.

Food—His Prescription

"It is a pleasure to meet you under more favorable conditions than I met you this morning," he said. "I am glad to see that you have quite recovered from your indisposition." Then, as the conversation became general, he added in a low voice if she felt perfectly well now.

"Perfectly," said Beatrice, "except that I feel a bit shaky."

"Have you eaten anything this afternoon?" asked the physician.

Beatrice thought for a moment, then laughed. "I declare," she said, "I believe that I have not eaten a mouthful since breakfast! I had a cup of tea at 5 o'clock, but ate nothing with it, for I was not hungry. I suppose that accounts for my queer sensations."

"It certainly does," affirmed the doctor. "You will be all right as soon as you get something to eat."

At this juncture John Robbins came downstairs and dinner was announced. There was a cocktail at each place when the party sat down at the table. Beatrice sipped hers as she chatted with the two men between whom she was seated. Her chair was at her host's right, while on her left was Dr. Yeager. Opposite her was Keith Lacy, and diagonally across the table, on Helen's left, sat Dr. Haynes.

The stimulant made the widow feel stronger, and she was glad to have it, and she suddenly became aware that she was hungry. One of the effects of a cocktail taken on an empty stomach is to create a factitious appetite, another is to excite the brain. Beatrice found herself enjoying her dinner, and eating and talking more than was her wont. She had never appeared to better advantage. Her cheeks glowed and her eyes sparkled. She led the conversation and the others followed her delightedly. She hesitated when, during the second course, the maid filled her glass with champagne, and she turned questioningly to John Robbins.

"John," she queried, "ought I to drink this, or will it affect my head?"

Her host smiled reassuringly. "Drink it, of course," he urged. "It won't hurt you."

It did not, but the liquor taken into a stomach which no food had entered for a whole day seemed to permeate her entire being, and she talked brilliantly and successfully. The physician next to her watched with admiration. At last, under cover of the laugh that followed some story she had told the company, he spoke to her in a tone that the others did not hear.

About Paul Maynard

"I am thinking," he said, "how Paul would have enjoyed being here tonight. For he has mentioned you to me several times lately when we met in town before I came out here to visit him. Don't you think him a fine chap?"

Beatrice shot a glance at the questioner. She saw at once that his query was sincere and she appreciated that, of course, Maynard had told him nothing of the occurrences of last night and this morning.

"I don't know him very well," she parried, "but I think he is a stunning-looking man."

"He is as white and straight a man as ever lived!" said his friend enthusiastically. "As you do not know him well, you cannot imagine the depths of self-sacrifice of which he is capable. He has a quick temper, but a keen sense of justice. He has had a history that would have crushed or embittered a less noble character. Few, even of his most intimate friends, suspect what he has been through, and of which no fault of his own. But he is the kind of man who would meet death on his feet, and smiling."

The earnest tone, the memory of Paul's pale face in the afterlight last night and the love-look in his eyes, the subtle effect of the stimulant she had taken, all wrought upon the woman's sensibilities. She, too, lowered her voice as she leaned toward the man whom she hardly knew.

"I believe it," she said. For the moment, prudence, pride, wounded vanity were forgotten in the sweet emotion. Her voice sank almost to a whisper. "I wish you would tell him," she murmured, "what you have told me, and that I know—it all true."

Her Bungalow on Fire

The physician looked at her strangely. There was a moment's pause as he gazed into her brilliant eyes. And in that pause there came a sound of running feet out on the driveway, and of hoarse voices shouting "Fire!" In an instant all the men were on their feet, but John Robbins reached the long French windows first, and tore them open. As he did so, a sentence bellowed by his man-of-all-work as he dashed past the house was carried to the ears of the women, still sitting white and gasping in their chairs:

"For God's sake, Mr. Robbins, hurry. Mrs. Minor's bungalow's on fire, and her children's in it!"

Unless Children Are Reared in an Atmosphere of Love They Are Badly Reared, Says Ella Wheeler Wilcox

Copyright, 1913, by Star Company.

"WHAT," I am asked, "do you think of a mother who permits her sixteen-year-old daughter to entertain a regular caller without lights in the drawing-room, and who, by example, teaches her to be disrespectful toward her father and to disregard his opinion?"

I think such a woman unfit for the position and responsibility of motherhood. But, then, only one mother in one hundred is fitted for such a responsibility.

The silly lass, running about the yard screaming in shrill tones, while a kind hand endeavors to direct her little broad coupward away from night-hawks, where food and shelter await them, is as wise as the mother described by any correspondent—and she scores who resemble her. And the conceited and selfish rooster, who calls the barnyard fowls to witness his enjoyment of a worm he has unearthed is typical of the paternal side of many a family.

Indeed, the animal and bird kingdoms far more frequently illustrate wise, sensible and kind parentage than does the human race.

The parents who deny their daughters all association with young men and the youth who allow their children little the one described above are equally to be censured.

WARNED—By Ella Wheeler Wilcox

THEY stood at the garden gate.
By the lifting of a lid
She might have read her fate
In a little thing he did.

He plucked a beautiful flower,
Tore it away from its place
On the side of the blooming bower,
And held it against his face.

Drank in its beauty and bloom,
In the midst of his idle talk;
Then cast it down to the gloom
And dust of the garden walk.

Aye, trod it under his foot,
As it lay in his pathway there;
Then spurned it away with his boot,
Because it had ceased to be fair.

Ah! the maiden might have read
The doom of her young life then;
But she looked in his eyes instead,
And thought him the king of men.

She looked in his eyes and blushed,
She hid in his strong arms' fold;
And the tale of the flower, crushed
And spurned, was once more told.

One type indicates a selfish forgetfulness of the natural rights and needs of the young; the other seems surprisingly ignorant of the way of the world.

An Immoral Factor

The wife who influences her children to feel and show disrespect for the father is, to my thinking, an immoral factor in the world's social life.

To rear children in a home of discord, I have insisted, is far worse than to shadow them with a divorce scandal.

Nothing can ever compensate a child for the horror of a quarrelsome home.

It leaves a scar upon the heart that time cannot efface. Better be an orphan—or a divorce court orphan—by far, than grow up in such an environment.

When a child is one year old a father and mother of right ideas and a sense of their tremendous responsibility should begin to guard their conversation in its presence.

Even at that age children are keenly sensitive to voice and facial expression and their nervous systems are often injured by aggressive or quarrelsome attitudes between their parents.

The unhappiness which domestic scenes and words of anger and disagreement have caused little creatures of three and four years is indescribable, and would seem incredible to one who had not experienced or observed it.

Not only are children rendered unhappy by such experiences, but the seed is sown in their minds which will bear bitter domestic fruit for them in later life unless some great and wise influence is brought to counteract the early educations.

The bickering and quarrelling father and mother are instructing their children how to be unhappy when married.

It is an awful sin, yet it is being done daily in so-called Christian homes, and little is said or written against it.

Unless children are reared in an atmosphere of love, they are badly reared, no matter what material benefits are bestowed upon them.

Unless the home is the abode of love and peace it is worse than an orphan asylum.

Disorderly Conduct

The father and mother who indulge in wordy quarrels and disputes before their children are guilty of disorderly conduct, and are foes to public peace and morality.

The birth of a child ought to arouse the best and noblest traits in a father and mother, and should serve both to self control and the repudiation of selfish whims and ugly tempers.

It is a great responsibility to bring a human being into the world. But few parents seem to so regard it.

A Bachelor's Diary

By MAX

JAN. 19.—I had taken Manette for a walk this bright Sunday morning and surprised myself by taking her to church. I was not in the mood for mingling with the gay crowds that go boating and going and riding and driving on Sunday. Somehow the fact that Sunday is spent that way always gives me a shock, though I have never been what is known as a religious man.

We entered late and took a back seat that we might get out with less disturbance if the child grew tired. But she didn't, and I was glad, for to have gone out would have been almost an affront to the good man in the pulpit who had only six in his congregation. I decided that one was his wife. Manette and I made three, the janitor was the fourth, and I couldn't locate the other two.

I do not know what his text was. I was so occupied in thinking of the preacher and the janitor that I couldn't get interested in the sermon.

In all this vast world, Diary, there are not as good grounds or as many, for friendship between any two persons as between a preacher and the janitor of his church. It is the janitor who is always there. Sunday after Sunday the preacher preaches to the same man. The janitor. One is paid to preach and the other is paid to listen.

When a storm keeps all the devout away, or counter attractions on a bright day prove the strongest, it is the janitor who can testify that the preacher was present and did his duty, and the preacher who will prove that the janitor earned his salary, for he was there. Sunday after Sunday the janitor opens the church for the preacher and the preacher holds it open to preach to the janitor. There may be no tie of friendship existing between the preacher and his janitor, but conditions make such it should be strong and tender.

I was so amused of this, and felt such a compassion for the janitor, who is never paid an amount commensurate with his task, that I slipped a five dollar bill into his hand as we went out.

"For yourself," I whispered, when I saw him look toward the collection basket.

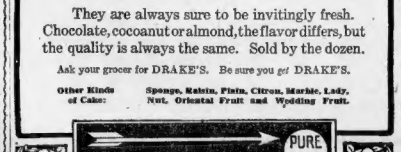
Every one in a way has a companion whose task, like that of the janitor, is to wait around and listen. That is your task, Diary, and I have been so busy that I feel sorry for you, and would reward you if such a thing were possible.

I have seen the widow several times since the night she asked me to kiss her. If I expected her to blush at our next meeting after that sacred rite, or foolish performance (which ever you choose), I was disappointed. She was so self-possessed and so unconcerned that I wondered if I dreamed it. We are together very much during the day, just as usual, and I am wondering if this ignoring of what happened means that she set in closing around me, or if it has opened and I am at liberty to escape. I confess to greater interest than if she had followed up her affectionate demonstrations, and would like to know if that is just the effect this most clever woman is seeking.

I notice that she has an unusually pretty mouth, that her lips are full and red, and I can imagine the tender look that would come in her eyes when she is using her lips for the very purpose for which such pretty lips were made. This curiously is provoking and tantalizing. I am always wondering if her experience with me decided her to seek no more, and what is the matter with me, any way, if a woman who has been kissed by me once doesn't want the experiment repeated.

I find myself thinking of this so much that I never leave my room after dark. I am afraid that if I met the widow again in a corner where it would be too dark to read that book of "Warnings," I might ask her to kiss me! And I can't do that because I don't want to marry her.

You remark that a kiss is not a proposal, Diary? Ah, that is where you show your ignorance of woman.



FRECKLES

February and March Worst Months for This Trouble—How to Remove Easily.

There's a reason why nearly everybody freckles in February and March, but happily there is also a remedy for these ugly blemishes, and no one need stay freckled.

Simply get an ounce of othine, double strength, from any of the Riker-Jaynes Drug stores and apply a little of it night and morning, and in a few days you should see that even the worst freckles have begun to disappear, while the light ones have vanished entirely. Now is the time to rid yourself of freckles, for if not removed now they may stay all Summer, and spoil an otherwise beautiful complexion. Your money back if othine fails.

WIFE, sed Pa, to Ma last nite, I know that you are a keen & thoughtful student of music.

Thank you, dearest luv, sed Ma. What do you menshon it?

Beekaus you can help me out, sed Pa. You can help me out very much indeed.

I cant help yes out much, sed Ma. There is only six dollars left and I guess you ought to get along on a dollar of it till you git down to the offis tomorrow. Tomorrow is payday, as I remember it.

As you remember it. His Ma, sed Pa, that is indeed a merry jest. Did you ever forgit anything about a pay day. Was there ever a Saterday morning, Pa sed, was you dident kiss me goodby with the love ilin shining in your eyes and ask me to be sure & cum home early?

I see you do not anser, sed Pa. I see that my shot went hoam. But seerously, sed Pa, I dount mean about munny or that you can help me that way. I mean that you can help me by putting sum music to a new Nashunal anthem wich I have wrote the words to. It ought to make a decided sensashun.

Indeed, sed Ma, what nashun are you going to mak immortal now?

Mexico, sed Pa, the poor country that is torn up so much of the time with war & revolushuns.

Well, sed Ma, if I am going to put the music to it, I want to know that the words is good. Show me the words. Many a brite yung musishun has wasted her talent on a lot of words that meant that much poppycock, Ma sed. Read the words to me. Then Pa read.

Nashun that we love the best,
Mexico,
Which is better than the rest?
Mexico.
Some grand mashuns had their day,
But they crumbled all away.
What's the country that will stay?
Mexico!

CHORUS.

Mexico, Mexico,
Wonderful mashun,
Running you seems like
A grand occupashun.
Poor little country
Still in your teens,
Chili-Con-Carny & Mexican beens.

Did I understand you to say, Ma asked Pa, that I was to put music to that stuff?

Oh, I thought you mite, sed Pa. Of course, it may not come to you rite off the reul, but I guess it will later.

If ever it comes to me, the verses, I meen, sed Ma, it will go from me so quick that yure bed will swim. Let sum Mexican rite the his ov anthems, sed Ma. You give me enuff songs wen you cum hoam lait at nite.

TO-DAY'S STOCK MARKETS AND ALL THE LATEST FINANCIAL NEWS

Stock markets in this country opened weak because of the financial situation in Europe, particularly in Germany, the engagement of millions of dollars in gold coin for shipment abroad and more or less uncertainty as to the attitude of the new Attorney-General toward several great industrial corporations and regarding dissolution of the Harriman lines.

It was said at the Department of Justice in Washington that no developments regarding the Harrimans are expected today. So far as can be learned, Attorney-General McReynolds was devoting his attention to other matters.

Prices steadily drooped in New York. Business was not especially brisk during the first hour, sales totalling only 118,500 shares, but weakness had increased. Utah Copper was down 1¾, Union Pacific 1¾, Reading 1⅝, Amalgamated 1⅜, Steel a point and Northern Pacific ⅝.

At that time in Boston coppers were ranging lower. Among the most marked declines were Lake, Chino, Superior and Butte & Superior which were off a point each. Butte & Superior had declined 1¼.

Money Situation Affects Stocks.

In New York at the opening the financial stress being experienced in Germany was reflected as it previously had been in London. Prices there were irregular and the trend lower. German bankers were seeking money in London as well as in New York. Berlin and Paris courses were weak.

Many issues were lower when the New York stock market began business. Canadian Pacific dropped 1½, while American Smelting was one point off, and Lehigh Valley showed a loss of ⅝. Reading and Amalgamated declined a point. Steel lost ⅝. Among the early declines were Utah Copper ½, Westinghouse ¼, Union Pacific ⅜, Southern Pacific ⅛, General Electric ⅜, and Pacific Telegraph & Telephone ¼. Can preferred, Inter-Met. and B. R. T. gained fractionally.

The Curb was irregular.

Americans in London were mixed.

Copper Metal Situation and Prices.

The copper warrants market was weak in London at the opening, spot and futures each being 7s. 6d. lower.

Regarding the situation on the other side of the Atlantic, Henry R. Merton & Co. of London say: "Though European buyers have taken up some copper, they have not been as out-and-out as manufacturers in the States, who appear to have availed themselves much more liberally of the opportunity given at the present level, which is certainly bringing out more business in the consuming industries. According to all reports, manufacturers are well supplied, and most of them have work in hand for many months ahead. With a peaceful solution of the political difficulties now confronting Europe and a return of confidence, copper should find a steadily increasing use."

Concerning prices asked yesterday, one of the best posted writers on the red metal says: "Taking everything into consideration of buying which started a few days ago some of the copper agencies yesterday morning raised prices about to about 15.10 cents a pound. The advance was not general and the market considered in good taste at the moment. Transactions continued to be booked at 15 cents in both foreign and home markets and there seemed to be no necessity to pay more with the tonnage available at that level."

"Katy" a Market Anomaly.

Thompson, Towle & Co. say: "One of the anomalies of the stock market is Missouri, Kansas & Texas selling at 22, having 4 per cent. annually in dividends and yielding 6.45 per cent. Missouri, Kansas & Texas has paid its preferred dividend which is non-cumulative, regularly since the beginning of 1906. Earnings available for the preferred for the first four years to the end of June last averaged $11 per cent. annually. In the seven months of the current fiscal year to the end of January the company earned a surplus after charges available for preferred dividends of $2,749,200, which is equivalent to 21.1 per cent. on the $13,000,000 stock outstanding, at the rate of 36.12 per cent. annually. Missouri, Kansas & Texas is in good physical condition, outlook for business is good and earnings should continue to show handsome increases."

Big Gold Shipments Announced.

The announcement of big gold exportations tomorrow had a marked effect upon stock and money markets. Millions have been engaged for shipment at the week-end. Part of the coin is going to Paris and part to South America.

Lazard Freres will send $2,000,000 to Paris. The Bank of France will thereby strengthen its position and is strictly curtailing disbursements of gold. For weeks past applicants have been allowed only 200 francs in yellow metal at a time. Yesterday not more than 100 francs were sold out to an individual. Today, it is cabled, the amount may be cut to 50. Part of the $2,000,000 gold coin to be used on Paris relieves the stringency in the Berlin money market. Germany is reaching everywhere after funds. Yesterday in New York German bankers raised their offers for loans from 5½ to 6% per cent. Germany is facing, it is feared, a crisis when April settlements are made.

The Hanover National Bank of New York has engaged $3,500,000 for shipment to South America. The Nassau City Bank has engaged $400,000 for the same destination. The National Bank of Commerce's shipment will be $200,000 and Goldman, Sachs & Co. will send $485,000.

Beer, Sondheimer & Co. will ship $200,000 to Europe tomorrow.

Financial News in Brief.

The American Steel Foundries Company in its annual report shows gross sales of $14,819,571 for the year. President R. P. Lamont states that the volume of orders on hand at present is, with one exception, the largest in the company's history.

The Lehigh Valley Coal Company will for the present suspend operations at all its workings three days a week, saving in an accumulation of coal and a poor demand.

Prices of steel bars for prompt shipment have been increased $3 a ton by Pittsburgh mills.

The Erie Railroad Company has ordered 1,500 freight cars and ten locomotives. There are orders pending for a total of 425 locomotives and 30,000 cars for various roads.

Directors of the Harriman National Bank elected Cornelius Vanderbilt and W. Averell Harriman, son of the late Edward H. Harriman, members of their board.

American Steel Foundries have a very large amount of orders on hand. Net profits for the company in 1912 were $777,756 on gross earnings of $14,319,572.

The St. Paul system reports January gross revenues 40 per cent. above those reported a year ago, and net earnings several hundred per cent. greater. Earnings this year were $7,283,000, a gain of $2,085,000, while the balance after expenses was $1,734,000, an increase of $1,498,000.

The London Statist says: "Securities of American railways appear to be especially attractive at current prices, and were it not for the situation in the Balkans and the heavy sales of stock that have been effected in consequence, much higher prices than those now current would prevail. The margin of profit behind many of the American railway dividends are so large that no anxiety may be felt as to a reduction in dividend, even in a period of relative depression, and, moreover, current prices of the stocks largely discount any reduction in dividend that might occur in such a period."

Auto News

By J. C. KERRISON.

The advance guard of the "barn-storm-ers" who do the big automobile shows began to reach town yesterday afternoon ready for the big Boston show, which opens tomorrow night. Roy G. Harris of the Firestone advertising department was one of the first to get here, followed by W. S. Petit, advertising manager of the Studebaker, Jake Newmark, advertising manager of the Oakland; Johnnie Move and John F. Reddick of the Goodyear, Clyde S. Thompson of the Diamond Tire, Sales-manager Diller of the Lauth-Juergens truck and a score of other factory experts from all corners of the Middle West.

* * *

W. R. Bliss, who is to be the new manager of the Portland branch of the Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, is in Boston as the guest of Manager McCreery of the local branch. Mr. Bliss comes from the factory and will remain here during the Boston show.

Kenneth Dresser, who is widely known in newspaper circles in Boston, will be associated with Mr. Bliss in the Portland branch. Kenneth goes back to his native State of Maine, having come into Boston newspaper circles after graduating from Bowdoin College.

* * *

Instead of showing the Kissel Kar line at the automobile show this year, Manager H. B. Pruden of the local branch will hold a show of his own at the Kissel Kar's new home at No. 1030 Commonwealth avenue, during the week of the show.

Manager Hathaway entertained the sales, agency and administrative forces of the White Company at a dinner at the Engineers' Club. Covers were laid for forty-two. Plans for the coming show were outlined and discussed.

SUFFRAGETTES DESTROY MORE MAIL IN LONDON

LONDON, March 7.—The postal brigade of the militant suffragettes' organization got busy in London today, and in spite of the combined efforts of the police and detectives, they destroyed a large quantity of mail matter. Acid was poured into letter boxes in the heart of the business district during the busiest hours.

The Women's Social and Political Union held a demonstration in celebration of the defeat of the premiers' candidates for the London County Council yesterday. The suffragettes, of whom were qualified to vote, opposed the progressives' candidates because the latter had the support of the Cabinet. "We have shown them that we are a power in politics, even if we have not all got the ballot," exclaimed Mrs. "General" Drummond, exultingly. It will not be very long before we control parliamentary elections, as well. We hope within five years to send women to Parliament as well as within ten years to be absolutely in control of the government."

Olive Wharry, alias Joyce Locke, was today found guilty of complicity in the burning of the pavilion in Kew Gardens and was sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment. She must also pay the cost of the prosecution.

MOOSE ASK SUPREME COURT TO HELP THEM

Trouble in the Loyal Order of Moose of the World, Boston Lodge 34, will be aired in court when Jesse W. Surth, William J. Reynolds, M. J. King, James E. Sullivan, and James Brown ask the Supreme Court to stop the proceedings brought against them in the lodge, and prevent them from losing their rights as members of the order. They allege they are the victims of a conspiracy, naming Fred A. Herbert, P. H. Litchfield, Benjamin Susan, William H. Corsor, and William F. Ellis as defendants.

DORCHESTER MAN WINS PRIZE DEBATE

Frederick W. Wennerberg of orchester is the winner of the gold medal offered at Boston College for the best debater of the Marquette Debating Society. Wennerberg was the second speaker on the negative side of the question, "Resolved, That the Present Condition of the People Justifies Demands for the Country's Welfare the Enactment of an Illiteracy Test for All Immigrants."

KING SAYS END OF FORECASTLE IS NEAR

Stanton H. King, superintendent of the Sailors' Home, says that the forecastle is doomed because it doesn't allow room enough for a man to sleep decently. "Lodging house keepers in the city of Boston must provide each man with 300 cubic feet," said King, "but the law allows a man but seventy-two cubic feet at sea." He gave lack of sleeping room as the chief reason for the absence of American sailors.

Poet Noyes for Suffragists, but Not Militants

NEW YORK, March 7.—"Of course I am a suffragist. My wife is, and she's an American," said Alfred Noyes, the English poet.

"I don't see why the women shouldn't vote," Mr. Noyes continued. "The only argument against suffrage is the militants.

"Your parades and pilgrimages are not militant. I quite understand that. They are picturesque. In fact they might be called the poetry of suffrage, for they drive arguments home through the imagination just as poetry does.

"Really I can't see why the suffragists don't stick to peaceable methods. I don't believe they've tried them for fifty years, as they say. I don't think they had much organization until they began window smashing. Of course they given them advertising, but where's the use of advertising that you're an idiot?"

YOU MAKE FRIENDS BY RECOMMENDING A RELIABLE KIDNEY MEDICINE.

Your representative called at my door yesterday meaning to leave a sample of your noted Swamp-Root and I am certainly pleased to see anybody connected with the firm who makes a medicine which has done so much for me and my family. A few years ago I was suffering from a terrible pain in my back and when I was up around the house I had to walk with my body bent nearly double. If you had placed a thousand dollars above my head I could not straighten up to get it.

Hearing of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root I sent to you for a sample bottle and from the effects of that small amount I was sure it would help me, so I bought one bottle and it has cured me.

Shortly after that my husband, who was a coal miner, was suffering from kidney trouble and could not work and I sent for some of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root. He was in a terrible condition, but as the doctors had not given me any relief, I had more faith in Swamp-Root and it was well founded, for it did the work and after taking a few bottles he was completely cured.

I daily recommend the use of Swamp-Root to my friends and neighbors.

Sincerely yours,
MRS JOHN MORQUIST,
Galeton, Penn.

The Tailors Who Will Make Things Hum in Boston

For many years we conducted but ONE Merchant Tailoring Establishment on Broadway, New York City. To be sure we had been at this "same old stand" a long while and had earned an enviable reputation as makers of fine hand-tailored clothes for New York's most fastidious dressers. One day the idea occurred to us that by multiplying our sales we could LOWER OUR PRICES. To do the former we had to do the latter. We acted on the idea. Down came our prices and UP WENT OUR SALES. Today, as a result, we maintain SIX of the MOST FLOURISHING MERCHANT TAILORING STORES IN NEW YORK CITY. The quality of our materials and workmanship has never been changed. Suits and Overcoats that once we made for $40 to $60, we NOW MAKE FOR $14.75, absolutely no more, pick out any goods in the house and the price THIS WEEK ONLY is $14.75, absolutely no higher. Our sales are enormous. Our profits are small, per garment, but far greater than we ever expected when the monthly balance is struck. We buy the whole outputs of woolen mills and stocks of jobbers and consignments of importers. We make 500 garments to most of our competitors' ONE. These are reasons why we so vastly undersell the "little fellow."

60 AND 62 SUMMER ST. BOSTON, MARCH 7, 1913.

LARGEST CIRCULATION IN NEW ENGLAND, DAILY AND SUNDAY

The AMERICAN Congratulates the Corporation Enemies of Mr. Brandeis, Who Have Kept Massachusetts from Representation in the Cabinet

For the first time since the Civil War, Massachusetts gave her electoral vote to a Democratic President, and a majority of the New England States did likewise.

BUT IN THE NEW DEMOCRATIC CABINET, NEW ENGLAND IS WITHOUT A REPRESENTATIVE.

Not before in generations has this occurred. Even when Massachusetts and New England gave their electoral votes to the opponents of the Democratic party, the Democratic Cabinet contained a representative from New England.

The services of Mr. Louis D. Brandeis to the principles which President Wilson has espoused, his services to the Democratic party in the last national campaign, his great ability, which President Wilson appreciated, all led the President to select him for the Cabinet.

But in rendering the services which qualified Mr. Brandeis for the Cabinet, he made enemies of the New Haven Railroad and of the United Shoe Machinery Company, who set their puppets at work to frighten the President from his natural selection.

It is sad that the first act of the new President seems to have been a timorous rejection of a good man because such a railroad as the New Haven and such a corporation as the United Shoe Machinery Company dislike him. If Mr. Wilson fears the hostility of such influences as are represented by Mr. Brandeis' enemies, his administration is bound to disappoint the country.

He may "summon all honest, all patriotic, all forward-looking men to his side," but they will not come if they may be black-balled by the agents of an exploiting railroad monopoly and of an industrial trust.

In the meantime some of the active New England Democrats who have secretly worked against Mr. Brandeis may gaze at the aching void which represents New England in the Cabinet and contemplate the early fruits of their labors.

The AMERICAN congratulates them all.

Six Men Have Halted the Cause of Woman Suffrage in Massachusetts—It Must Not Stay Halted

Six men have halted the cause of woman suffrage in Massachusetts.

On Wednesday, the Legislative Committee on Constitutional Amendments, by a vote of six to three, with two absent, reported to the House against the resolve providing for the amendment of the State Constitution by striking the word "male" from the voting qualification.

No sign of the times is more significant than the rapidity with which State Legislatures are wakening to the fact that woman suffrage is a pressing public question.

The New Year is barely two months old and already five State Legislatures have voted by sweeping majorities to submit to the voters constitutional amendments giving full suffrage to women; New York with only two dissenting votes in the Senate and five in the Assembly; Nevada with only three dissentients in each House; Montana with only two in each house; South Dakota by a vote of 70 to 30 in the House and 41 to 2 in the Senate, and Michigan with little opposition in either house. In Missouri the proposed amendment has been sent to engrossment by Senate and House. In conservative Pennsylvania a like measure has passed the House, 130 to 70, and is now before the Senate, and in three other of the States, New Jersey, North Dakota and Iowa, it has passed one house and is awaiting the action of the other. In short, legislators all over the country realize that woman suffrage is a matter on which the voters want to have a deciding voice.

This does not mean that all the legislators who have voted to submit the amendment are necessarily in favor of votes for women. Some have frankly said they are opposed, but that they believe the time has come when the question can no longer be settled by the personal opinions of the men who sit in legislative halls. And they are right in thinking that no legislative body can justly withhold from the voters the power of decision on a question that is admittedly one of vital public concern.

Yet, if the report of the Committee on Constitutional Amendments stands, the six men who voted against the resolve will have held up the proposal to submit, and thus forced their opinions, the opinions of six men, upon hundreds of thousands of voters. If twenty-one members of the Senate vote for the acceptance of the report of the committee, those twenty-one men will do the same thing. Obviously such conduct would make a dead letter of the constitutional provision for amendments.

It is monstrous if six men, or twenty-one men, are to settle such a vital question.

On the other hand, there is no danger that an amendment can be forced upon unwilling voters by a legislative majority. If the voters do not want the amendment they can and will defeat it. The question for the legislator to ask himself is, therefore, not "What do I think about woman suffrage?" but, "Is woman suffrage of sufficient general interest to go to the voters?"

In Massachusetts the question has been agitated for nearly fifty years with steadily increasing strength; yet during that period it has never been submitted to the voters. It is about time that our legislators, too, should wake up to the importance of this issue and realize that it is not their business, but the business of the voters to decide whether Massachusetts shall have woman suffrage or not.

Concentration of Thought Will Bring to Any One the Things That He Most Desires

It Can in Time Lift You Out of Disagreeable Environment—To Love Something Is the First Step Toward Success and Happiness—Love Constructs, but Hate Destroys Our Creative Powers.

By ELLA WHEELER WILCOX

AWAY off in a little country town in California a mechanic's wife with a crawling mind and a hungry heart is wondering what she can do to better herself mentally. "Living among people who care only to work and save, I have no pleasure, and confess that I am very discontented with my lot," she writes. "Can you tell me what to do to get what I want?"

Her case is typical of thousands of growing souls all over this great, ambitious, restless land. The money ambition has hold of our men, the ambition for mental advancement has possession of our women. To this woman, and to all like her, it is seemingly useless to say, "Learn the law of mental concentration"; unless that law is explained. When it is explained, it sounds much like the old orthodox promise of "happiness in heaven" to the restless, discontented mind.

Yet in that law lies all the hope of bettering such conditions. I have known a brilliant, strong-willed, ambitious woman to beat her life out against the walls of such an environment with useless rebellion and unfocused longing.

Concentration Would Have Won Her Everything She Desired

Nothing came which she desired, and every hope receded in the dim horizon of the unattainable.

Had this woman USED IN CONCENTRATED HOPE AND FIXED PURPOSE the same amount of energy she exhausted in rebellion and discontent all she desired would have come to her in time.

Thought is one form of energy.

That is a scientific fact, and must be remembered.

If we waste our energy in discontent and rebellion against fate, we do not have it to use in shaping new conditions.

Instead of despising and hating what we have, there is great wisdom in seeking for something to love, something to be glad about in our environment and to steadily turn our thoughts toward the time when what we want shall come to us.

Once we find the central thought, of love, it will become like the first star of evening, or the first dim ray of light at dawn, and will prove the harbinger of a glorious effulgence if we continue to gaze.

By Loving Our Surroundings We Can Make Conditions More Pleasing

TO LOVE SOMETHING is the first step toward success and happiness. The more We love the more success and happiness will be ours. Love is constructive, hate destructive; love constructs our own creative powers, and hate destroys them.

However uncongenial may be our surroundings, we can never hate them into better conditions. WE CAN LOVE THEM INTO BETTER CONDITIONS.

Let the discontented woman say as she goes about her daily tasks, "I am creating a beautiful home, a beautiful life, for my loved ones and for myself. All that I desire shall come to me. It is here already, only my eyes are not clear enough to see. Love, peace, happiness, beauty, rest, refinement all are mine."

However meagre, or repulsive even, may be her outlook, if she will insist upon these assertions and these thoughts, and continue to picture to herself the surroundings that she desires, a change will come. It may be slow, and by degrees, or may be by leaps, BUT IT WILL COME.

Two years ago a business man was in the depths of despair, and nothing but trouble and discord enveloped him. He was given the key to better conditions by a friend who wrote out for him a list of words to say and meditate upon.

Instead of thinking of things as he found them, he thought of them as he desired them. Employment, success, prosperity, harmony, growth, happiness, opulence were the words given him for his rosary. At first in derision, then in amusement, then in curiosity, he began to repeat the words.

Suddenly he found a great calmness resulting from their repetition. Then, with renewed interest, he continued, and new strength seemed to be given him. Hope followed, and the ambitions he had thought dead awoke to life.

Prosperity came next, and affluence stands near today.

The discontented woman should seek for cheerful, helpful literature while she waits for her life to blossom into happiness.

Optimistic Volumes Should Be Easily Found in Any Library

Every library in our land today should classify its books, so that OPTIMISTIC volumes can be found as easily as the poetry, history or philosophy. More and more the world wants this mental food.

There are many periodicals that offer a world of helpful, hope-building literature to weary, tired minds. These are all props for the growing soul before it has learned to journey alone toward Truth.

"Seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you."

Contemplating Matrimony

Dorothy Dix Writes an Open Letter to the Young Girl Who Is Feeling the Call of What She Thinks Is the Great Love of Her Life

Read This, Fathers and Mothers—Read This, Young Misses—Read This, Young Men. There Are Vital Truths in It That Will Help to Make Your Lives and the Lives of Those You Love Nearer to the Ideal

By DOROTHY DIX

MY Dear Little Girl:

You tell me that you are seventeen years old, and that you are thinking of eloping with a young chap who clerks in the haberdashery store that you pass every day, and who has perfectly stunning eyes, and wears the SWELLEST clothes.

Whenever you catch a glimpse of him your heart just goes flip-pety-flop, and you have little chills and fever just exactly like Lady Gwendoline experienced in the "Earl's Daughter," and you could listen forever to him talk while he called you "Baby Doll" and "Oh, You Kid." Besides which your step just matches his in dancing, and he likes pink strawberry ice cream like you do, and he's just crazy about the movies, as you are.

By all these signs and tokens you know that what you feel for him is a deep, unalterable love, the passion of a lifetime, and that he is the one man in the world that fate and nature destined for your mate.

And seventeen doesn't seem so very young to you. You feel quite—quite old, and very wise, and experienced; and you haven't a doubt that you are perfectly capable of deciding the most important problem of your whole life.

Of course, your mother and father object, and say that you are nothing but a baby, and that there'll be plenty of time to think of love and getting married when you are really grown up, but parents are such old fogy people, and so unprogressive, such altogether back numbers, that it's mere weakness to listen to their views, or to be influenced by them.

So you and Percy—isn't that just the most romantic name?—are thinking about eloping, and getting married in spite of your mammas and papas.

Don't do it, little girl. I know you hate figures, but just cast your eye over the cold, hard statistics of divorce, and they will show you that more than 75 per cent of the marriages that end in disaster were the result of elopements, or where very young people got married. Naturally you are sure that you and Percy would prove a grand exception to the rule. Maybe you would, but the experience of thousands and thousands of other miserable men and women show you how terribly the odds are against you. You haven't got even a gambling chance for domestic happiness.

Most Divorces Follow Elopement or Marriages of Young Persons

You think that the feeling that you entertain for Percy is love. It is not. It is the dawning of sex consciousness. It is your first realization of the fact that you are a woman, and that Percy is a man, and that between the two there is the mysterious call of sex sounded by nature.

Your mother is too modest to talk to you about such things, and that is why you and millions of other little, young, ignorant girls blunder into matrimonial misery. They mistake the flutter that man in general produces in their breasts for love of some particular individual man. Distrust your emotions, my dear, as you would a band of traitors that were trying to deceive and lure you into slavery. Don't marry any man until you have known many men, and can distinguish between the excitement that the attention and society of anything in masculine garb inspires in you from the deep and pervading contentment you feel in the presence of the One Man in the world for you.

And don't answer every call that comes along for fear you will miss saying "Yes" to the right one. When he arrives you will hear his voice, though it is whispered to you across the ocean.

You say that you are perfectly confident that Percy is your ideal of all that you wish in a husband, and that you could never, never tire of him, though you lived to celebrate your diamond wedding anniversary. To get a line on how taste changes at your age just try to recall how crazy you were over that pink dress last Winter. You thought it the very quintessence of style, and smartness, and beauty. Now you wouldn't be caught dead in it.

Also recall the way you had your room fixed up with college flags, and photographs of the boys and girls, and dinky little souvenirs, and how perfectly grand you considered it. They went into the discard after you took that course of art lectures and found out that bare simplicity was the thing. And do you remember how mad you were over chocolate fudge until you got an overdose of it? Now the very name of fudge gives you nausea.

Your Young Husband May Not Develop in Same Way You Do

Believe me, all those disasters, and more, are almost sure to repeat themselves if you marry when you are seventeen. Your taste isn't formed in men, any more than it is in books, or food, or clothes. You are at the growing time of life, and your point of view, your demands, your ideals enlarge with every year, and unfortunately you can have no guarantee that your husband will develop in the same way that you did.

He may stay just what he was when you married him, or he may go backward, and then what are you going to do? Take it from me, little girl, a last year's husband is sometimes harder to put up with than a last year's hat, and you can have a spiritual nausea at the companionship of a man you've outgrown that is a million times worse than any physical affliction. So put off getting married till you have come to your maturity. There are enough risks in matrimony without taking any risk on the kind of a woman you are going to be yourself, or the sort of a husband you'll want when you grow up.

Consider, also, little girl, that if you marry when you are still a child, you deliberately cut yourself out of the only play time of life that the average woman ever has. Her girlhood is the golden hour of a woman's existence. It is the time when she is care-free, and every one conspires to make her happy and give her a good time. Even the happiest wife has her burdens, her restrictions. She must sacrifice herself to her husband and children. Take a look at some poor, sickly little babe before you let yourself in for walking the colic at an age when you should be turkey trotting.

Finally, beloved, don't elope. You may not believe it, but your parents are your best friends. They have nothing at heart but your interest, no desire—but for your happiness, and if they are not willing for you to marry, rest assured they have good and sufficient reasons.

Don't elope. Don't sneak off and marry unbeknown to those who have made so many sacrifices for you.

Wait until the law makes you responsible for your own actions and gives you a right to do as you please. Then you won't have to elope, and the chances are that you wouldn't look at the youth you once contemplated running off to marry. It will give you such cold shivers when you think of what you have escaped that you'll turn up your coat collar.

Think a long, long time before you marry, little girl. For it takes five minutes and a dollar and a half to get married, but it requires sorrow and tears, and lawyers, and much money to get a divorce. It's always a lot easier to get into trouble than to get out of it—and may Heaven preserve you from the folly of an early marriage.
